The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We go the distance for you."

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Things Were Slow Then

We Live At A Faster Pace Now But This Slow Is Just Ridiculous

By Dan Rattiner

Like everybody else who lives here full time, I drive up and down Montauk Highway every day. Sometimes I drive up and down the highway three times, even four times a day. There should be ruts in the road from all the driving up and down I do. I did the math once. So far, the number of miles I have driven up and down the highway, if extended end to end, would get me one tenth of the way to our nearest planet, which is Mars. Not that I would like to go to Mars.

It occurred to me this morning, as I drove past a particular sign at the eastern extremity of the Village of East Hampton, that sometimes you can get so used to something you no longer see it. For instance, the sign. It reads WELCOME TO EAST HAMPTON, FOUNDED 1648. There is another sign at the entrance to Watermill that reads WELCOME TO WATERMILL, FOUNDED 1644. And at the entrance to Southampton there is a sign reading WELCOME TO SOUTHAMPTON, FOUNDED 1640. Under it is another sign reading PLEASE OBSERVE OUR DRESS CODES. I haven't noticed these signs for years and years, either.

What exactly do they mean "founded?" Did somebody head over six miles from Southampton and say hey, you should see what I found... I found a BRIDGE.

So I am driving along and I'm thinking, I know we live in an age when things move really fast, but here's a bunch of signs indicating that back then things moved really, really slow.

I mean, the Pilgrims paddle across from Connecticut to Southampton and found that place in 1640. Then, four years later, they found Watermill. Watermill is just three miles down the road. Then, four years after that they found East Hampton. East Hampton is another nine miles down the road from Watermill. This is at the amazingly slow pace of just one and a half miles per YEAR. You know how slow that is? A snail can go faster than one and a half miles per year, if he has a mind to.

This, apparently, is how slow things went back then during the Pilgrim times. God knows how long it took them to row down from Connecticut.

No wonder, when the Pilgrims first pulled their

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

The lady has great style and let us add great courage as an extreme-sports skier. But Lady Luck was not on Donna Karan's side when (...and this next part really impressed us!) she took a fall on her skies. This was no bunny hill we are talking about. Karan took an expert-only trip on a helicopter to get to just the right spot to downhill from Idaho's Sun Valley. According to her spokesperson it will be a difficult recovery and may take months to mend her broken knee. We wish you a speedy recovery.

Boy, we're glad we are in the fold. Last summer HBO Soprano stars appeared in our summer magazine South of the Highway and we particularly enjoyed the company of young Robert A.J. Iler. He's in a legal fix in New York and it seems that his T.V. Dad on the Sopranos is well...acting more like his "Godfather". James Gandolfini sent Justice Wittner a letter that made him an offer that... hmmm....he couldn't refuse. Gandolfini, in his letter, politely asks to be of some assistance in anyway regarding Robert.

Hamptonites John and Margo Catsimatidis hosted a fundraiser for Oklahoma Gov. David Walters who's running for re-election. Big wigs attended to say the least. Bill Clinton, Sen. Bob Kerrey, Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and the biggest wig appeared or maybe appeared to be on ...the eternal Gina Lollabrigida. Couldn't resist that one.

It could make turning 40 years of age bearable. Star Jones (who's been known to make our party scene out here in the summer) decided she wanted to fly away to Montego Bay for a weekend bash. For a bash, you definitely need more than one. So, Star flew 40 of her closest friends to be the bash. If you were on that plane then you would be with Denise Rich, Kim Cattrall, Natalie Cole and Lorraine Bracco. Missed the plane well, you could have caught the yacht. Seemed their food supply or head-count was wrong....so that clever Denise Rich pulled out her American Express Black Card and the girls hit McDonalds on the Island. You can take the girls out of the Country but you can't take McDonald's out of the girl. Also, what the hell is a black card?

boats up on the shore at what is now Southampton, the Native American Indians came running over to help them. The Indians showed them how to build huts so they wouldn't freeze to death through that first winter. The Indians showed them how to cook corn and potatoes. If it weren't for the Indians, at a fast trot, carrying the Pilgrims piggyback over to Old Town and lighting the oven fires for them, they'd probably still be up there in North Sea shuffling around, starving and freezing to death, trying to get down to County Road 39.

One of the great historical mysteries here in the Hamptons involves the first words ever uttered by a Pilgrim after landing in Southampton. It was a woman, and she climbed out of the front of the first boat, and she said, "For conscience sake we have arrived." Where they arrived, to this day, is known as Conscience Point. They've got a big boulder marking the spot there with a bronze plaque on it upon which is engraved this famous quote. What the hell did she mean? Now we know. She meant it had taken them twenty-two years to row across from Connecticut and boy was she glad they were finally there. Mystery solved.

Then there is something else about these WELCOME TO BLAH-HAMPTON, FOUNDED 16-BLAH-BLAH signs. What exactly do they mean "founded?" Did somebody head over six miles from Southampton and come back and say hey, you should see what I found?

What did you find?

I found a BRIDGE.

Or maybe somebody had a golden shovel. They had a big ceremony, everybody standing around, the photographers there with the flashbulbs popping, and the mayor puts the golden shovel in the ground, scoops up a shovelful, and everybody applauds.

There were two golden shovels by the way. Maybe three. I know there were at least two because in 1640, the same year they dug the first shovelful in Southampton, they dug the first shovelful in Southold, up on the North Fork. There has long been an argument between these two villages about which came first, because whichever it was was the first English settlement in the State of New York. Quite an honor. And today, the residents of Southold and Southampton have these amazing conversations about how somebody WALKED THROUGH what was to become Southold in April of 1640 and so that was first while in Southampton they talk about how somebody sat down on a tree stump in March in Southampton or founded a schoolhouse in May and so that was first.

Of course, who was really first were the Shinnecock Indians, but that's another story.

What people are absolutely sure of, however, is that there were two completely different sets of people who rowed over from Connecticut that year, one to Southold and one to Southampton, and neither saw the other because there is no record of anybody waving to another group of rowers or anybody rowing harder to try to beat anybody as they crossed the water, but the REAL reason there had to be two groups, and hence two golden shovels, is because there is no conceivable way, given the pace at which things went here in the Hamptons, for anybody to go the 17 miles from Southampton to Southold with just the one available shovel in any time less than what it would take for Mars to circle the sun.

There even might have been a THIRD and FOURTH golden shovel. The Village of Westhampton Beach, to the west of Southampton, has a sign at the entrance to that Village reading WELCOME TO WESTHAMPTON BEACH, FOUNDED 1666. And Montauk, to the East of East Hampton, has a sign reading WELCOME TO MONTAUK, FOUNDED 1660.

Frankly, considering the snail's pace the Pilgrims were moving at, I find these signs to be extremely suspect and of dubious historic accuracy. By my calculations, to this day, it would be impossible for these villages to have been founded yet. •

Rumrunning Shootouts

Some Fishermen From Newfoundland Find Work In Montauk At Night

By Dan Rattiner

For a period of just over thirteen unbelievable years not too terribly long ago, the people of the United States were told that they could not consume alcohol. It was fine in Europe. It was fine in South America. It was even fine in Canada. But here in America, after many demonstrations by American women who were tired of having their men come home drunk from bars, Congress succumbed and voted through the Volstead Act on October 28, 1919. And at the stroke of midnight on January 16, 1920, Prohibition officially began. Government agents with pickaxes were then sent out to all distilleries and wineries in the United States and for about thirty days the country was treated to pictures in its newspapers of huge casks and barrels being broken open and the contents spilled into nearby rivers. All around, there were sad, sad faces.

This story is not well known today. But for those around then, there was one town on the east coast that was on everybody's lips. Montauk. That's where they brought in the good stuff. We've got some of it in the back.

How Montauk got to be the prime point location for bringing in liquor from abroad is an interesting story. Around twenty years earlier, at the turn of the century, a group of French Canadians from Newfoundland founded a fishing village at Montauk. Going out and bringing a catch back home was one thing. Going out, getting a catch and bringing it to Montauk was another. Montauk had a railroad that went straight to Manhattan. There was a sheltered bay and some old docks built not too long before by the military. (Teddy Roosevelt and the Roughriders and the entire American Army had returned from their victory in Cuba to Montauk in 1898). And Montauk's weather was warmer, so its fishing season was longer. Also, Montauk was swarming with fish. Montauk was a great idea if you were a Newfoundland fisherman.

When the Volstead Act was signed into law in 1919, here on the East Coast, all eyes turned north towards Canada. Wasn't there some family named Seagram that had some distilleries in Canada? Joseph Seagram, a wealthy Canadian distiller, soon grew richer by exporting gallons of whiskey to America. In 1929, Seagram sold his business to Sam and Alan Bronfman, who also made a fortune exporting whiskey. And they did it through Montauk.

Beer goes down the drain

The idea was simple. Agents would arrive in Montauk looking for fishermen willing to work at night loading and unloading. They spoke to them in French. A coin would be produced. It would be broken in half, and one half given to the Newfies. Go out in your fishing boat at night and along with the stuff get the other half, which will be aboard a supply boat just beyond the US territorial waters — twelve miles offshore, which became known as the Rum Line — and there's lots of money in it for you.

It was a wild, wild time. The Coast Guard established a base at Montauk, where their cutters could dock during the daytime and then go out at night on raids.

It was a wild, wild time. The Coast Guard established a base at Montauk, where their cutters could dock during the daytime and then go out at night on raids to catch the fishermen who accepted this challenge. Early on, many fishermen made tons of money. But as the Coast Guardsmen appeared and earning that other half of the coin became harder, the fishermen went into the speedboat building business. There were Montaukers, over on the arc of Fort Pond Bay where the railroad docks are, building low, sleek, pencil shaped-boats — cigarette boats they called them — which were powered by 1100 horsepower Allison airplane engines. If the Coast Guard appeared, they could put these boats into overdrive and, even fully loaded, roar off at nearly fifty miles an hour. The name cigarette? The boats had no cabins above decks. From afar they looked like cigarettes zipping along, a man at a wheel with a windshield — usually made of bullet-proof glass — in front of him, and nothing else in view. Even the Coast Guard was impressed.

By day the Montaukers fished. By night they rumran. Cigarette boats would roar out, pull up alongside a small freighter out of Canada, load up, get the other half of the coin, and move off. A half-hour later, they would hit the beach at Fort Pond Bay, and rapidly the boxes of liquor would be unloaded and carried off to waiting trucks, or, if the trucks hadn't made the link up, to temporary shelters in the woods.

The contents of the boxes were disguised, of course. Plush toys is what the boxes held. Or cylinders of Quaker Oats or even sets of dishes. Sometimes, indeed, there WOULD be a set of dishes, and the booze would go on the bottom and the dishes would go on the top. Super-strong springs and shocks would support vehicles into which the illegal cargo was loaded. These cars and trucks, looking like all the rest to avoid drawing attention, had a long, bumpy trip to make into New York City.

I have often wondered what it must have been like at Montauk Village on the arc of the bay during the late 1920s and early 1930s. In its heyday there were more than a hundred buildings there, restaurants and general stores, homes and boathouses, post offices and even a schoolhouse. It was alive with people, night and day, and it prospered. Today, the village no longer exists — it had been on land owned by the railroad that was not for sale — and then the whole place was wrecked by the Hurricane of 1938. Finally it was bulldozed when the Navy bought the land during World War II. But a diorama of this village does exist, lovingly created by some of the old Newfoundland fishermen. They sketched the location of the buildings to history students in the late 1970s. It is on view at the East Hampton Marine Museum on Bluff Road in Amagansett today.

Shootouts

There are some wonderful stories told about those rumrunning days, handed down from father to son. One time, a surf fisherman, watching a Coast Guard cutter chase a cigarette boat, saw the authorities slowly gaining ground, and then, as the mate on the cigarette boat threw one crate after another over the side, slowly lose ground as the cigarette boat roared off. The surf fisherman visually marked the spots where the crates splashed. Later that day he was out there in a skiff with a rope and a hook, bringing them up.

There were gunfights. One lasted almost an entire night, as one group of rumrunners, holed up with about a hundred cases of hooch, fought off another group of rumrunners who wanted to make off with them. Two people died in this exchange.

There is the story of a huge truck, the size of a moving van, that wheezed away from the little village, made its way along the narrow two-lane road that is now Old Montauk Highway, hit a rock, blew a tire and fell over onto its side. The whiskey could be smelled for miles. And people were picking broken glass out of the road for years.

In East Hampton, there was a very meticulous man who owned a drugstore in the center of town. Every day at 8 a.m. he would go out to his garage, open the door, get in his car and drive the mile and a half to work. One morning, he opened the garage door and found about forty crates of "party noisemakers" completely blocking his car. He had no idea who put them there. But he had to go to work. And so, with great effort, he moved the boxes out to his driveway, pulled out his car, put the boxes back, closed the garage door and drove off to work. At nightfall, when he put the key in the lock of his drug store, he just prayed that when he got home the crates would be gone. They were.

Lots of people made lots of money during the thirteen years that it was illegal to take a drink in America. Among them were Canadians, Scotsmen, tough Mafia types with limousines and big trucks, and some Montauk fishermen from Newfoundland who worked during the daytime, during the nighttime and wondered how the hell they ever were ever going to get some sleep. •

MANNY QUINN IN BOCA

Dehumanizing Manny

He May Not Have Been Human In The First Place But We Miss Him

By Dan Rattiner

I was with my friend Bob, driving up Long Lane in East Hampton the other day. We were talking about this and that. Long Lane is straight as an arrow, one lane in either direction, just over two miles long and running through some farm fields, and it connects Newtown Lane and Steven Hand's Path on the way to Sag Harbor. Among other things, the Iaconno Farm is on Long Lane. They sell good roasting chickens there.

Anyway, Bob was driving and I was in the passenger seat, seatbelt on, and suddenly, about a mile further up this long and empty road, Bob spotted a trailer parked on the shoulder. Strapped to the roof of the trailer was what looked like a lit up basketball scoreboard. There was one number on it. 38. And as we went toward it in silence, it went to 36, then to 41, then back to 39. We both knew what it was. It was the police radar trailer reading you your speed as you approached. And since we were the only car on the road, it was reading us.

"Watch this," Bob said.

He pushed his foot to the floor and his Audi A-6, a very powerful car, lurched forward, pinning me to the back of my seat. 42, the big lit up sign read. Then 53. Then 65. Then 76. The speed limit is 45 miles an hour on this road. And then we were past the trailer and Bob was breaking hard to come to a safe halt at the stop sign at Steven Hand's Path.

"Not bad, huh?" he said. In three quarters of a mile, he had broken just about every speeding and reckless driving law in the book. But nobody was around.

"I got a sign on Napeague up to 98 once," he said. "Probably the highest it's gone. Not that people haven't driven faster than that. But you have to see it from just three-quarters of a mile off, so it doesn't give you much time to accelerate. Maybe seven seconds."

The purpose of the sign, of course, is to make motorists look and see that maybe they are going a bit over the speed limit and maybe they ought to slow down.

All I could think was that, if Officer Manny Quinn were still around, Bob would never have tried anything like that. But then, Manny has been retired about three years now. Down in Florida at Port St. Lucie, they tell me. And so this perils of Pauline goes on and there's nobody to put a stop to it. Too bad.

He never missed a day. He never raised his voice at anybody. He never drew his gun. He never chased anybody.

Officer Quinn came to the East Hampton Town Police Department in 1988 and there isn't anybody in town that doesn't remember him. Every day, seven days a week, through snowstorms and heat waves, all year-round, Quinn could be found sitting in his police car parked along the side of one road or another in town, his windows rolled up, looking steadily and expressionlessly out at the oncoming traffic, his mere presence causing people to slow down, suggesting that if you did not do so he would write you a ticket.

Manny worked for the department for almost exactly ten years. He never missed a day. He never raised his voice at anybody. He never drew his gun. He never chased anybody. And then, without ceremony, completing a tour of duty that involved kidnapping, vandalism, traffic calming and theft, he retired. Had he accepted medals, which he did not, he probably would have been the most highly decorated police officer in East Hampton history. But he did not accept them, didn't believe in them, and when he left town, he left for good, going to Port St. Lucie some people said, or to the San Francisco Earthquake ride in Disneyworld where he could stand statue-still near some wreckage, a policeman about to rescue anybody in need or arrest anybody who started thinking about post-earthquake vandalism.

career in the window of Saks Fifth Avenue in Southampton. After he was bought by the East Hampton Town Police, fitted with an officer's uniform and hat, he was then sent out to sit in his police car by the side of the road to help keep the peace. He never complained. They put him out there at 9 a.m., brought him back into police headquarters at 5 p.m. and stored him in a locker. He never got paid, he never ate a meal, he never drank a cup of coffee. He just did his job.

Sometimes Manny would sit in his police car in front of the boats at Town Dock on Three Mile Harbor Road. I could see him out our living room window. People would drive down the road and slow down, then pass Manny, realize he was only a mannequin, then speed up. Once, a driver pulled over and parked his car in front of Manny, cautiously got out, walked over to him and asked him directions to Abraham's Path. When there was no reply, he asked again but louder. Then he let out a shriek, ran back to his car and drove off.

Another time, I saw THIS. Didn't report it. Just saw it.

Manny's tour of duty that day was not on Three Mile Harbor Road. But about 10 a.m., a real police officer in a real police car came on the scene on Three Mile Harbor Road, pulled over to the curb, stopped, reached into a bag and stuck onto his face a false black moustache. Manny had a moustache. This officer sat extremely still, in his car on the side of the road.

After awhile some high school kids drove by, stopped in the middle of the road, slowly backed up and then backed alongside the curb. They were three car lengths in front of this police officer. They got out and warily tiptoed in the direction of this policeman. He was sitting perfectly still, his eyes straight forward, his moustache slightly askew.

Then the teenagers arrived. The officer cocked his head, shouted "BOOO!" and the teenagers ran off screaming. Then the officer, laughing hysterically, put his police car into gear and drove away.

I said earlier that Manny never lost a day of work and that is not true. One time they set him out and he simply vanished. Went AWOL. Officers investigating the crime scene found the driver's door unlocked, apparently as the result of an effort with a coat hanger.

The next day, Manny's left arm was found in a box in front of Town Hall. There was a note. They had him and they wanted to negotiate for him. They didn't say what. Just if the police did not meet their demands there would be more pieces of him arriving. Turned out to be a prank. During the night, somebody returned with Manny and sat him on the hood of a police car parked in back of the station where the police could find him. A daring operation, one might say. Manny was found and the perpetrators were never apprehended. The perfect crime.

Another time, Manny was the victim of more serious business. He was kidnapped from his car and held without any communication with the authorities for over a month. Then he was found at the Town Dump, in a dumpster. There were some injuries. But after surgery, recuperation and some rehabilitation, he was back on the job. Good as new.

I for one miss Manny. He did his job and he did it well. He was friendly and in keeping with the rest of the landscape, a rural police officer parked by the side of a rural road. Now he has been replaced with a bunch of flashing lights that look like Las Vegas.

Manny would never have put up with anybody speeding along Long Lane. Things have gone downhill since he was here. Bring him back.

We want Manny. •

WATERFIELD
Financial Corporation

In 1928, Richard Waterfield thought nothing of getting in his car and driving 160 miles (each way) to hand deliver the paperwork to ensure a fast closing on a home loan. Making sure that a client could purchase a home quickly and easily was just his way of doing business. Today, this same philosophy separates Waterfield from other mortgage companies.

We believe, as many small businesses do, that each individual deserves our complete attention and commitment. Unlike other big lenders who make you wait through the days of red tape, our front line people can make quick decisions right in the field. Our dedication to customer satisfaction has enabled us to expand nationwide, despite the ever-changing real estate market. Because of our growth, we now have the resources of a large corporation. Waterfield is the largest privately-held mortgage company in the country with offices nationwide. This stability means that we will remain in the market to honor terms and service mortgage payment for years to come.

Since 1928, Waterfield has specialized in mortgage lending. Our team has the resources and expertise to provide for the best service possible, throughout each step of the process. Our high level of customer satisfaction from time of application through closing and into loan servicing has enabled us to become the oldest and largest privately-held mortgage banking firm in the United States.

Real Estate Business – Rentals And Sales – Reflect A Very Interesting East End Trend

By Dan Rattiner

Here's what's going on in the real estate business in the Hamptons this spring. Rentals are off. Prices are up. Sales are down. And it's wonderful news.

What's really happening in the real estate business is a function of what's happening in the local economy. There has been a trend. In the last few years, prices for good real estate have gotten so high that only the very upper echelons of society can afford them. And these upper echelons are so upper they do not need to be in New York City all the time. Wednesday and Thursday will do just fine in the summertime, thank you. And three or four days a week are plenty for the other seasons. The rest of the time, they either have people come to them out at their Hamptons' homes or they work by fax, e-mail and phone while looking out at the beach. It is a perk of senior positions, and it allows leadership to think. At least that's the excuse.

This trend has also resulted in a boom for numerous businesses that have, up until now, struggled. Among them, for example, is the business of private schools. Five years ago, there was just one private school. Now there are at least four and all are booming.

From this perspective, "real estate" is considered not so much an investment — buy it, come out every weekend, then sell it later at a profit if possible — but as a place to put down roots. What used to be "summer cottages" are now year-round residences, with all of what that means for a community.

"Real estate" is considered not so much as an investment — buy it, come out every weekend, then sell it later at a profit — but as a place to put down roots.

And so there are fewer sales being made, which causes more demand, which creates higher prices. Also, people are less likely to rent their houses out. They don't need to. And besides, who wants people taking over where you live for a few months while you worry about what they will do to your stuff?

For someone just getting out of school and eager to start a business here, I would suggest the hardware business, the landscaping business, the building business or the high fashion retail business.

The area is changing. Our summer people are becoming local residents. And they are in such numbers that in a short time they will soon, I suspect, elect some of their own to public office. I think we will see someone who grew up in New York City and who still has an apartment there running for Town Supervisor. And winning.

The effects of this are very profound, and they are not all bad. Our beautiful landscape and seascape, with all its bays, lakes, ponds and harbors, will be in the hands of those with fat wallets who care. Not a bad combination. Culture and intellectual activities will boom. Education and the local newspaper business will boom. (Yea!) And the formerly tourist-based economy, which caused this place to be called a "resort," will decline. This is not a bad thing since the tourist economy tended to be unpredictable — at the whim of the weather and fashion as it was — and it is being replaced by something very rock-solid for which I cannot yet find a name.

It is not suburban. People don't go trudging off to work to the big city every day. It is not agricultural, although the fat wallets will save a good bit of the agriculture. It is not urban and it is not some frozen-in-time tourist destination. It is a PLACE. And that is good.

You know, if you look at the East End, not from a recent perspective but from a long term perspective, the changes taking place are rather positive. They are wrenching for individual people, to be sure. Having something always stay the way it was is a great comfort. But the East End has changed from one place to another place, in a manner of speaking, regardless of all the sturm un drang that accompanied those changes.

For example, the North Fork, which was largely devoted to potato farming fifty years ago, slowly lost ground to mechanized and more efficient mega-farming methods in the Midwest. It is now home to a vast wine industry and the two seem to blend. The wine industry on the upswing, the potato industry on the downswing. In the interval, before the wineries and vineyards arrived, many of the towns on the North Fork suffered through a serious decline, reflecting the waning fortunes of potato farming and commercial fishing and the demise of shipbuilding. Now these towns, Riverhead and Greenport, are coming back to life.

On the South Fork, the Village of Sag Harbor might serve as an example of this long view. It has gone from being a port of entry into the United States, to a major whaling town, to a blue collar manufacturing town, and then to a near complete collapse in the 1960s when many homes were simply abandoned. A Manhattan-based summer home industry rescued it with many restorations of these small homes, then a tourist business helped it thrive further through the eighties and nineties, and now Sag Harbor has gone into the gentrification business. I have little doubt that the old Presbyterian church steeple — the tallest structure on the East End, built around 1900 and visible for miles until its collapse during the Hurricane of 38 — will soon be restored. Steel will keep it up this time. And it will cost millions. But the people with the fat wallets will see to it and no amount of storm or wind — within reason, of course — will be able to knock it down again.

Enron, Playboy & Fortune

Playboy Puts Out The Call For A Women Of Enron Fold-Out Centerfold

By Dan Rattiner

Here's the latest news about Enron.

On Monday, Playboy magazine announced that it wants to do a fold-out centerfold entitled "The Women of Enron." Playboy has sent out a press release.

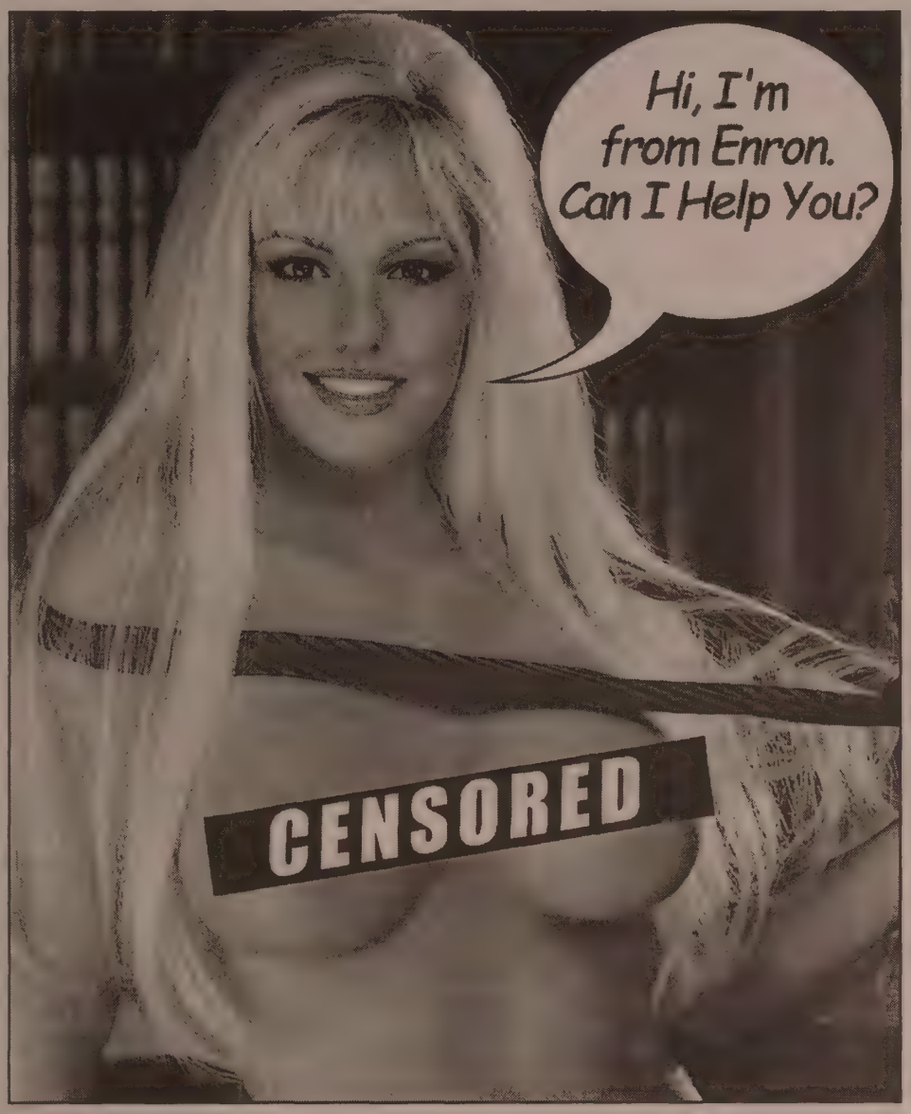
"When one door closes, another opens," said Gary Cole, who is the photography director at Playboy. "Playboy is offering the women of Enron an exciting opportunity that may lead them down a new career path."

The thing about taking all your clothes off, if you're a woman anyway, is that there's a secure financial future in it. You slide up and down the pole on the stage and they put green dollar bills in your garter. You can see them. They're yours. Nobody can take them away from you. Or you get in a ring with Gennifer Flowers and after three rounds they pay you about ten thousand big ones. You put it in the bank.

This is likely to have great appeal to attractive, young, female former energy managers at Enron who went to these boring jobs inside the Enron skyscraper in Houston with the cockeyed E out front, saved up all this money for retirement, and then had it stolen from them by management. All quasi-legally, mind you.

"Smile please," the Playboy photographer will say. They will not smile and this could be a problem.



On Tuesday, Enron was in the news again when Fortune magazine came out with their annual ranking of the largest 500 corporations in America. Important businessmen all over America wait for this list to come out. Moving on up is a feather in your cap.

The big news at the top of the list this year was that WalMart, which was number two last year, moved up to number one, replacing ExxonMobil. But who was that down at number five? Why could it be? Yes. Enron, last year's number seven, is charging toward the top.

The editors at Fortune felt obliged, obviously, to explain this ranking. After all, the Golden Parachutes, bringing to earth all the top Enron executives, were still floating gently to the ground. This would give them an opportunity to write an editorial.

"How did Enron finish fifth on our 2001 ranking of the Fortune 500?" Fortune asked. "To begin with, Enron, going by the re-stated financials it issued for the first nine months of last year, inarguably, was a huge company. In fact, its $139 billion in revenue for nine months exceeded General Electric's full-year revenues of $125 billion."

"Smile please," the Playboy photographer will say. They will not smile and this could be a problem.

I think you know where this is going. Because Enron declared bankruptcy, they never filed a fourth quarter. So Fortune used the numbers from the first three quarters and compared just those first three quarters to the full four quarters of all the other companies. A handicap! Surely that was fair.

There is one sentence in this official explanation which sort of jumps out at you and it is this. "To begin with, Enron, going by the re-stated financials it issued for the first nine months of last year, inarguably was a huge company."

According to everything I have read, whatever the reported revenues were for the first three quarters, they weren't accurate. The Enron officials were hiding everything. The investigation continues and it's all coming out. There has been a "re-statement." And there will be more "re-statements" as the investigators demand the accountants plug up all the dummy corporations and remove the dubious accounting practices. In the end, it may turn out that what revenue Enron took in during those three quarters was little more than you could fit into your average breadbox.

The problem here, therefore, is that the editors of Fortune magazine accept the numbers provided them by the discredited accountants. (Anderson fired the one who "made the mistake.") Aren't the editors members of the Fifth Estate? If the numbers are NOT true, and the editors know it, the accountants know it, the stockholders know it, the former Enron executives know it and some might go to jail for it, the Attorney General knows it and the public knows it, don't these editors have the guts to at least give Enron an "incomplete?" Are they afraid some regulatory agency will pull their license to practice Financial Journalism? Or are they failing to see that there is any other choice besides accepting inaccurate information?

I think the editors of Fortune should be forced to take their clothes off and pose for Playboy. There are exciting new career opportunities in taking your clothes off. •

Gabreski

The Fighter Ace After Whom Westhampton Airport Is Named

By Jerry Cimisi

When Francis S. Gabreski, one of America's premier fighter pilot aces passed away on January 31, it was hard to believe that he almost did not make the cut in military flying school. He handled a plane awkwardly. He had been quite nervous flying solo. According to how Gabby later told it, he had found his instructor in the Army Air Corps (there would be no U.S. Air Force until after WWII) difficult to get along with. Another officer in the Corps, Captain Ray Wassel, thought the young Gabreski should be given another chance. In September, 1940, Gabreski was put through an Elimination Flight designed to give a struggling trainee one last chance to make the grade. Gabreski's performance was not impressive, but it was adequate enough; he was allowed to continue in the Corps. Wassel assigned Gabreski a new instructor thus ensuring the deaths of a number of enemy pilots down the line.

Francis Gabreski was worrying more about his girlfriend Kay when he awoke on December 7, 1941, in Hawaii, than the course of the war that was already two years old in Europe. Kay Cochrane was the niece of an Army colonel. Gabby had met her on the beach at Haleiwa. They had begun dating that autumn, but had had a major falling out the night of December 6. Gabreski was at his mirror shaving, brooding over the angst of romance, when he saw a small gray plane with red circles on it flying overhead. Then came the bombs.

Soon, but not soon enough, Gabreski himself was flying over Pearl Harbor, aerial witness to the destruction that the Japanese had left.

As he came in for the kill, he was hit. He crash-landed. He was alive, but a group of German soldiers were running toward the plane. Gabreski ran into a nearby wood...

America was at war, and the young Francis S. Gabreski, his life pushed into considering important things, became engaged to Kay even as he prepared to put his life on the line in the sky. In March, 1942, Kay and all military dependents were evacuated from Hawaii; the Pacific was a battleground. But it would primarily be a naval realm and in September, 1942, Gabreski was sent to Washington, D.C., where he found himself briefing the military brass about the attack on Pearl Harbor ten months previous. For a time he felt displaced in the war. But that would soon end. After visiting Kay and her family in Pennsylvania, he was sent to England and the European Theater.

He would fly in his first mission in a Spitfire in January, 1943. His colleagues in war came from the RAF Polish squadron. Gabreski, of Polish descent, could speak to them in their native tongue. Assigned to the 315th squadron, Gabreski flew over France on his first mission, but he and the others in his formation did not encounter the Luftwaffe. Gabreski's first meeting with the Germans came on February 3. In this, his premier battle, Gabreski fired at two planes that were quite a distance from him, not scoring any hits. On returning to base, Gabreski saw in the footage of the gun camera a much closer target he had overlooked in the excitement.

Gabreski flew 25 missions with the 315th squadron but met no enemy planes. In late February 1943, he was assigned to the 56th Fighter Group, who took to the air in P-47 Thunderbolts. Gabreski was by then a Captain on the verge of an unexpected promotion. In May, 1943, his superior officer, Hubert

Zemke, called on Gabreski to take command of the 61st Fighter Squadron. "A year earlier I had been a carefree lieutenant on the beaches of Hawaii, learning how to fly, now I was CO of a P-47 squadron, about to lead it into combat against the toughest opponents on Earth."

Gabreski would gain his first victory in the air in late August, 1943. From then on they came with some frequency. Gabreski would later count the mission of December 11, 1943, as one of the most harrowing of his life. He was on a 200-plane bomber escort mission over the North Sea. At an altitude of 22,000 feet along the northern coast of Holland, the P-47s were about to rendezvous with the bombers and found the bombers already under attack by German Bf-109s and 100s, which were equipped with rockets that could be fired at the bombers. Gabreski scored a hit on the Tail End Charlie of a trio of Bf-100s moving away from him, but even as he watched the hapless German spiral down to the cold waters in his plane, Gabreski could see no other planes from his squadron in the sky. And he also noted he was very low on fuel.

As he headed westward, trying to fly at the most economical speed and altitude, he saw a German Bf-109 coming at him at three o'clock. Gabreski did not have enough fuel for a dogfight, nor enough fuel for evasive maneuvers. The German, of course, tried to bring Gabreski down. Gabreski twice avoided fire, but was not so lucky the third time. Gabreski's rudder pedal and part of his boot were shot away on the German's third pass. The engine began to sputter. Gabreski tried to pretend he had taken a more direct hit. He spiraled downward, trying to control his aircraft as best he could, but soon the German realized Gabreski was not finished after all and dived downward to fire again. It was in the clouds below that Gabreski finally eluded the German fighter and just managed to return to the base in England.

D-Day: June 6, 1944, Gabreski commanded his squadron in sweeps over the beaches of Normandy. By early July, when he scored his 28th kill in the air, Gabreski surpassed the record for victories set by WWI ace Eddie Rickenbacker. Soon he reached 31 kills. At this point (he had also logged 1,930 missions), Gabreski was due for a furlough back to the States. But as he was waiting to board the plane that would take him home, he found out that a mission was going out that very morning. He decided he would be on it, wanting to fly just one more, before taking a break from the dangers of war.

It was July 20, 1944. Flying over Germany, he tried to strafe enemy fighters parked at a base below. But as he came in for the kill, he was hit. He crash-landed. He was alive, but a group of German soldiers were running toward the plane. Gabreski ran into a nearby wood and eluded capture for days with the help of a sympathetic Polish forced-laborer he encountered. It is not surprising that the man would resent the Nazis; then there was the fact that Gabreski was Polish and spoke the language. The laborer brought Gabreski food. But after five days Gabreski was captured and held at Stalag Luft I, a prison camp on the Baltic that had been opened in June, 1940, for RAF personnel.

He shared a barracks in one of the 20 man shacks that were surrounded by double rows of barbed wire. Though the men did not suffer the hellish conditions of a concentration camp, Hogan's Heroes it was not. The RAF and American prisoners kept their own military hierarchy alive. Lt. Col. Francis S. Gabreski was commander, North III Compound. On December 17, 1944, Colonel Hubert "Hub" Zemke, the man who had given Gabreski his first command, arrived at the camp. Because of his rank, Zemke became commanding officer of the captured men.

The POWs there had their own improvised radios on which they tried to keep up with the progress of the war. They even managed to print a newspaper, as well as dig about a hundred tunnels, in attempts to escape, though only a few of these attempts were successful. But the progress of the war was on the side of the captured men, if they could hold out. By the spring of 1945, food at the camp was getting low. The Soviets were advancing from the west. On April 30, 1945, the commandant of Stalag Luft I ordered the Senior Allied Officer to prepare the prisoners for evacuation. The Allied prisoners responded that the Germans would have to force them to move. Weighing the circumstances, the Nazis thought it would not be worth it to have to fight a mob of prisoners while the Russians advanced; the Germans abandoned the camp.

Stalag Luft I was liberated by Colonel Pavel Batov of the 2nd Belorussian Front. But the war weary Russians did not extend much effort to secure the Allied prisoners more food and water and, in fact, made difficult Allied preparations to evacuate the prisoners, though this finally occurred in the middle of May. Eventually 1,415 British and 7,083 Americans were released by the Soviets to their respective forces. Gabreski and his old comrade, Hub Zemke, were freed. Yet again, there had been more than a few obstacles by the communists.

Late that June one released POW, Sgt. Anthony Sherg, related that several hundred of the prisoners who had been in Stalag Luft I were being confined

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 194

My friend of ineffable beauty, Patty McGayhey, sent me a hysterical email. It qualified for a ROTFLMAO response.

For those of you not online, the internet has evolved its own shorthand, etiquette, grammar and syntax, among these, acronyms rule. When someone sends a humorous email, or says something humorous in a chat room, there are three levels of response signified with three acronyms now recognized around the country. The first level of response after reading something funny is to response with the acronym, LOL, which means Laughing Out Loud. The next level is ROTFL, which means, Rolling On The Floor Laughing. The third and rarely used response, which I reserve only for material that actually makes me laugh out loud is ROFLMAO, which means, Rolling On The Floor Laughing My Ass Off.

The email Patty sent me fell into the ROFLMAO category. Here is the content:

Recent research shows that there are five kinds of sex.

The first kind of sex is Smurf Sex. This kind of sex happens when you first meet someone and you both have sex until you are blue in the face.

The second kind of sex is Kitchen Sex. This is when you have been with your partner for a short time and you are so horny you will have sex anywhere, even in the kitchen.

The third kind of sex is Bedroom Sex. This is when you have been with your partner for a long time. Your sex has gotten routine and you usually have sex in your bedroom.

The fourth kind of sex is Hallway Sex. This is when you have been with your partner for too long. When you pass each other in the hallway you both say "F— You."

The fifth kind of sex is Courtroom Sex. This is when you cannot stand your husband any more. He takes you to court and screws you in front of everyone.

Not to be outdone by the person(s) who initiated this funny email, I thought of a few extra categories...

Beach Sex: Any kind of sex you have only once because you saw it in the movies and it looked so good you tried in real life, only to discover the fantasy was so far from the reality that having done it once, you can now beach the whole idea.

Boat Sex: Good sex, everything's moving with you and nobody is around. No phones, no answering machines, no doorknocks to answer, nothing in the cooler but wine and cheese. You can walk around naked in the open air.

Rock Sex: You've slept with everyone available on Shelter Island and are now at the beginning of the loop again.

Tourist Sex: The police on Shelter Island could write about five columns on this. Tourists who have had intercourse on front lawns in broad daylight on Menantic Road, tourists who have sex on the ferries, tourists who have sex on the beaches, and on and on... The first retired SI cop to write a book about being a cop here will make a million dollars, more if he takes payoffs NOT to publish

Rabbit Sex: When you're older, you say to your partner, "Let's pretend we can give each other the bodies we had when we were 25, turn off the lights and f— like rabbits.."

Cain Sex: Annoying sex. He thinks he Cain, but for whatever reason, he's just not Abel. He annoys you until he falls asleep.

Sport sex: Could be a one-night stand, could be a person you just schtup occasionally, any time the sex is just for sex and nothing more.

Cash Ass: Applies to the young women I see in the summer with men old enough to be their father or even grandfather. Everyone knows she's with him for the money. You never see a babe with an old, poor, man. I believe that when you sleep with a man for his money alone, you earn every penny of it.

Chequit/Dory Sex: Going home with whatever is breathing and consensual at 2 a.m.

Crab Sex: My personal favorite. When you took care of the guy so good, he brings you crabs the next day. Limited to adults who live near salt water.

Macy's Sex: When you see a sale on some gorgeous China, Service for 12, or an appliance you need, or a fantastic necklace/earrings set, or anything special you want. You offer him the orifice and location of his choice if he buys it for you. Use sparingly.

Zucchini Sex: When a man matches this vegetable both physically and mentally, bringing you joy and sorrow at the same time.

Airport Sex: Sex so good it puts you on another plane.

FROM RED CARPET TO YOUR CLOSET

In case you missed my Oscar-Knockoffs segment on The View last week, here are the hot looks from the red carpet and the look-alikes that women even on Hamptons share house budget can afford.

1. HALLE BERRY - The big winner of the evening for awards and glamour, wore Lebanese designer Elie Saab's $40,000 gown. Our look-alike version from Victor Costa also uses Middle Eastern fabrics and will cost $750.

2. JENNIFER LOPEZ was dazzling in a $35,000 Versace couture and we duplicated the look at Daffy's for under $75.

3 JULIA ROBERTS - the biggest smile and per-film bankroll, Julia dressed comfortably in this $3000 Georgio Armani dress and we found our look-alike at dresses.com for $285.

4. KATE WINSLET wore a Ben de Lisi gown (we could find the price but you know it is expensive) and Niki by Niki Livas did the look-alike at $140.

5. RENEE ZELLWEGER -wore a Carolina Herrara gown costing $12,000 and our interpretation from dresses.com cost $298. Check out the jewelry: Renee's waterfall diamond chandelier costs a whopping $500,000 at Harry Winston and our CZ version from Imposter costs $30. Happy shopping.

by the Russian Army in Rostock, where Sherg said he himself had been held for a few weeks before being released. Follow up investigations could not confirm Sherg's account. Perhaps it was a foreshadowing of things to come. After the war, Francis Gabreski was a test pilot for several years. At the beginning of the next decade, he was fighting the communist incursion in Korea, where he achieved 6.5 kills.

Some of the medals Gabreski received: US Distinguished Service Medal; Distinguished Service Cross; Legion of Merit, Bonze Star; British Distinguished Flying Cross; Polish Cross of Valor; French Croix de Guerre with Palm; Belgium Croix de Guerre and French Legion d' Honneur. And more.

Gabreski was made a member of the National Aviation Hall of Fame in 1978. •

Dan's North Fork

Conversations with John Ross:

By Susan W. Simm

They say that Americans aren't traveling these days. I beg to differ, at least here on the North Fork. In fact, those that are seem to be doing it in a big way.

My husband, David, just returned from China – with stops in Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Beijing – a trip he took as part of a graduate program at Columbia University. And before David had deplaned at JFK and stretched out his long limbs after the 20+ hour flight from Hong Kong to New York, John Ross was off across the other ocean on his way to another ancient civilization: the Czech Republic's beautiful city of Prague.

Why Prague? "My son, Stewart, is working for the Institute for International Relations," said John. "While we were there, I had the opportunity to enjoy some of the foods of the region. The tradition and recipes are as old as the Hapsburg, Bohemian and Premysld Empires themselves." Indeed, Prague, which John describes as "way beyond beautiful," under Charles the IV – from 1346-1378 – became the capitol of the Holy Roman Empire.

Although goulash is very popular in Prague, it "is actually a Hungarian beef soup named after the keepers of magyar oxen (gulyas)," said John. "The origin of this dish dates back to the 9th century."

Prague Goulash

In a heavy saucepan, sauté 4 cups sliced onions in oil until golden. Add 1 pound beef stew meat (cut into 2" cubes) and cook until meat is brown. Add coarse salt and pepper to taste and 1/2 cup tomato paste. Reduce heat, cover and simmer about 30 minutes (the meat will be glazed). Add 1/2 pound each veal and pork (cut into 2" cubes) and continue to simmer slowly, covered, about 30 minutes more. Add 1 cup white wine and continue cooking until meat is tender. Stir in 1 cup sour cream and serve over egg noodles.

Budapest Goulash

Sauté 3 thinly sliced onions (about 4 cups) in 1/4 cup lard (or shortening) until golden. Add 1/4 cup Hungarian paprika and 1/4 cup red wine vinegar. Cook 5 minutes. Add 1 1/2 pounds beef stew meat (cut into 2" cubes), coarse salt, ground pepper and 1 teaspoon of thyme. Cook, stirring, until meat is brown. Add 1/4 cup tomato paste and 1 teaspoon chopped garlic. Cook until meat is glazed. Sprinkle 1/4 cup flour over meat and cook briefly. Add 2 cups beef broth, stir, and cook, covered, until meat is tender. Garnish with lemon zest and caraway seeds. Serve with boiled potatoes.

Transylvanian Goulash

Melt 2 tablespoons shortening in a heavy saucepan and sauté 2 cups chopped onions until golden. Stir in 1 teaspoon chopped garlic and 1/4 cup paprika. Add 1 1/2 pounds pork (cut into 1" cubes) and cook until lightly browned. Add 1 cup chicken broth and bring to a boil. Spread 1 pound fresh sauerkraut over meat with 1 tablespoon caraway seeds. In a small bowl, mix 1 cup chicken broth with a 1/4 cup tomato paste and pour this over the meat mixture. Cover and simmer slowly until pork is tender. To serve, skim off excess fat and stir in 1 cup of sour cream. Serve over egg noodles.

Talk about feeling at home!

Galluccio Estate: NOT For Sale

Despite a swirl of rumors that have reached as far as New York City, Galluccio Estate/Gristina Winery is not currently on the market.

"The property is not listed anywhere," said owner Vince Galluccio from his winter home on the coast of Florida. "No real estate people are involved. I have no idea how this whole thing got started. I've been out of town since December." In fact Vince, who thinks that maybe his property has been confused with another on the North Fork that is being actively marketed, has made some major improvements to his property over the winter and has big plans to "downscale but upgrade" his whole operation this spring. "Judy and I don't want to build another business. We want to enjoy the fruits of our labor."

A is for Appellation

There is no doubt that the intriguing lexicon surrounding wine adds to its mystery and allure. But just as anyone who has traveled to a foreign country without being fluent in the native tongue knows, a few carefully chosen words and phrases can easily make the difference between "I would like the porterhouse steak medium-rare" and "I would like to marry your neighbor's cow." And while it is undeniable that ignorance can, under certain circumstances, indeed be bliss, a few things learned about the vocabulary of wine are bound to increase your drinking pleasure. Here, from Wine Spectator magazine, are a few definitions you are almost guaranteed to run into.

Appellation: defines the area where a wine's grapes were grown, such as Bordeaux, Napa Valley or, as of 2001, Long Island. Regulations vary widely from country to country. In order to use an appellation on a California or Long Island wine label, for example, 85% of the grapes used to make the wine must come from either of those regions.

Barrel Fermented: denotes wine that has been fermented in small casks (usually 55-gallon oak barrels) instead of larger tanks. Advocates believe that barrel fermentation increases body and adds complexity, and adds texture and flavor to certain wine types. Its liabilities are that more labor is required and greater risks are involved. It is mainly used for whites.

Blanc de Blanc: literally "white of whites," meaning a white wine made from white grapes, such as Champagne made of Chardonnay grapes, as opposed to Blanc de Noirs: "white of black," meaning white wine made from red or black grapes. In the latter case, the juice is squeezed from the grapes and fermented without skin contact. The wines can have a very pale pink hue, such as the luscious Dom Perignon Rose.

Cuvee: a blend or special lot of wine.

Finish: the key to judging a wine's quality is finish, also called aftertaste – a measure of the taste or flavors that linger in the mouth after the wine is tasted. Great wines have rich, long, complex finishes.

Malolactic Fermentation: a secondary fermentation occurring in most wines, this natural process converts malic acid into softer lactic acid and carbon dioxide, thus reducing the wine's total acidity. Adds complexity to whites such as Chardonnay and softens reds such as Cabernet and Merlot.

Meritage: an invented term, used by California wineries, for Bordeaux-style red and white blended wines. Combines "merit" with "heritage." The term arose out of the need to name wines that didn't meet minimal labeling requirements for varietals (i.e., 85 percent of the named grape variety). Macari Vineyard's Bergen Road is a fine example.

Methode Champenoise: the labor-intensive and costly process whereby wine undergoes a secondary fermentation inside the bottle, creating bubbles. All Champagnes and most high-quality sparkling wines are made by this process.

Nose: the character of a wine as determined by the sense of smell.

Viniculture: the science or study of grape production for wine and the making of wine. Often confused with Viticulture: the cultivation, science and study of grapes, not just for wine production. Although it's easy for some of us to forget that they are grown for any other reason... Cheers.

Away At School by David Rattiner

Lights

Approximately two weeks ago my friends and I were playing Frisbee on a Thursday afternoon. It was a beautiful day in Boston, not a cloud in the sky and the birds were singing. The game was very low key, we were just tossing it around and trying to make trick catches. In the middle of a toss my cell phone went off and startled me because it has a vibrating option. I answered it and it was my Dad on Long Island.

"David!"

"Hey Dad how are you?"

"Have you forgotten you have to go to Aunt Nancy's tonight?"

"In New York City?"

"Yes, tonight is Seder."

"I haven't actually worked out how I'd get there," I said, ransacking my brain for ways to get to New York.

"You have six hours to get there, I'll see you then." (Click)

These kinds of arrangements with my Dad are nothing new when it comes to Jewish holidays. None of the family on my Dad's side really has any idea when the holidays are coming except for Hanukah because that's right around Christmas, and even then we are never really too sure exactly what day it starts. I started to tackle the mission at hand, which was get to Manhattan.

I asked my two friends, Dave Hales and Jim Rice, if they were up for a trip to New York City. I knew that they wanted to go from a discussion earlier in the year about taking a trip into New York some time to see Ground Zero with our own eyes. Both of them replied, "ROAD TRIP!"

I was really excited because Jim has a friend that lets him use her car, and driving there would mean saving two hundred bucks. Jim fled the park and headed back to get the keys. The car was the oldest, dirtiest dinosaur that I had ever seen. It was a 1989 Chevy Cavalier, the interior piled with garbage. After holding our noses and doing a ten minute clean, we hopped in and headed out. We got on I-95 and flew to New York City – well, clanked along is more like it.

It was a classic road trip. We had to stop and pop the hood because a "check engine" light went off making Jim nervous. None of us knows anything about engines and though I worked at a gas station one summer, all that I ever learned how to do was check and change the oil. So that is exactly what I did. It turned out that the car did not have any oil so we went to the nearest gas station and argued over the amount of oil to put in. We put in four quarts and we were getting cranky. I bought a big bag of beef jerky and some chocolate milk to cheer everyone up, but it only gave us heartburn and gas. The car probably would not have been able to make it to New York if it hadn't been for the resulting flatulence our snack caused.

Hitting the middle of New York's rush hour, we moved on, crossing Whitestone Bridge to get to Manhattan. Finally we made it to my uncle's apartment on the Upper East Side. Seder was great and it was a lot of fun to see my family and introduce my buddies to them. The dinner itself was wonderful, nobody really fought and the food was excellent. I even ate the chopped liver. But once nine o'clock rolled around we got ready to leave. I told my uncle a white lie that we had to get going back to Boston now because it was going to be a long drive. We left the apartment saying good-byes and got out into the street. Really we had but one goal, which was to see the Towers of Light up close and personal. Our corollary mission was to do a quick two-hour tour of New York City for Jim's sake, because he is from a town in New Hampshire and has never seen the big city before.

We hailed a cab. We would see Times Square, Greenwich Village, then see the Towers of Light. Not an easy thing to do in two hours flat. After that we had to head back to Boston because all of us had class the next day. We'd be up all night. We got dropped off in Times Square; Jim was in awe. We took some pictures with cops on their Harley Davidsons. Then we just started walking the thirty-five blocks toward the village. Jim liked the village a lot, but we really had our hearts set on the Towers of Light. All we wanted to do was see them for their beauty and significance. It was now 10:45 p.m. and we really wanted to leave New York by 12:00 or at the very latest 12:30.

So we started running toward the lights to save time, our eyes focused on them. We talked to a local and he told us the best view of them was at a platform where there is a beautiful memorial and the lights just shine straight up. We slowed to a trot and could see the memorial in the distance.

"It's going to be so great to see them from that position," I said.

As we approached we further slowed to a walk and looked up at the lights. We were no more than 1000 feet away now and we focused on the Towers of Light, all of us looking straight up. Suddenly they began to flicker. There were three quick flickers then the lights shut off. What happened? Did somebody pull the plug?

After a little investigation we came to find out that New York says lights out to the Towers of Light at 11 o' clock. Unbelievable. That's all we were going to get. We were laughing and angry at the same time and I started to remind myself that I am the son of Dan Rattiner, and that I was just going to have to get used to these types of things.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

I hope everyone had a lovely Easter holiday and Passover. I did. I spent the day with my family at my son Joe's and daughter-in-law Janie's and had a great day. I love family gatherings for the holidays. Don't you?

Hold on, it's sale time again at Christopher Fischer Cashmere Collections on Jobs Lane in Southampton and Main Street in East Hampton. This sale is a biggie, 75% off selected merchandise (women's, men's and home accessories). This sale ends on April 7, so hop on down and have a great shopping experience.

I stopped into Casual Home on County Road 39 in Southampton and found a ton of great furnishings and accessories for the country home lover. My friend Blaise spotted a couch and immediately took measurements and if I know him, he went back there and purchased it already. There are some markdowns on selected merchandise, which is classic, classic and comfortable.

Looking for some of the most eclectic furniture for the Hampton lifestyle? EGO Collection on Montauk Highway in Watermill has a wonderful selection to choose from.

In the Bridgehampton Commons, I stopped into Wild Bird Crossing and found everything I needed to get ready for spring. Lot's of birdhouses, bird baths, bird feeders and seed. Where else would you be able to buy binoculars and field guides? Look no further, you will get them here. Also, there is a nice selection of wind chimes for all of us that really like them. Get going, the early bird always catches the you know what.

Love the architectural details at Architectural Details on County Road 39A in Southampton and on Newtown Lane in East Hampton. I shopped around and found beautiful bath accessories, decorative hardware, faucets, shower enclosures, sinks, lighting, plumbing and custom kitchens. WOW!

Side Show on Main Street in East Hampton is doing their spring cleaning to make room for new merchandise. Look for good quality winter clothing at 50% off. Go for it!

Looking for some fabulous Teak? At The Bayberry on Montauk Highway in Amagansett you will find lots of it at 40% off. There is a large selection of dining tables, chairs, lounges, side tables, benches, and more, everything you need to make your home and garden warm and inviting.

On Main Street in Sag Harbor, at Romany Kramoris Gallery there is such a wonderful array of eclectic merchandise and leaded glass. Also Romany is zeroing in on custom leaded glass classes. Give her a call at 725-2499.

Time to get the outdoor hot tubs going. At Harbor Hot Tubs in Sag Harbor, they do it all, hot tubs, saunas/steam, spas, and pools. Located on Division Street, stop in and check it out...Get started early, it's been a long winter season.

A hot tub, fireplaces and all that stuff, Sag Harbor Fireplace is having a spring sale on selected gas stoves. Located on Bay Street now is the time to check this out. There is still a chill in the air, and don't forget that cold wind in August.

At Unlimited Earth Care Landscaping, they do it all, layout, installation, maintenance, trimming, planting, transplanting, pruning, floral gardens and much more. Give a call at 725-7551.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

ROSS SCHOOL STUDENT PHOTOGRPAHY AT SOLAR: "MAKING AN IMPRESSION"

"Making an Impression: Within the Walls of Cuba" is not only a worthwhile photography exhibit about a salient place, but an effective use of art as an educational tool. Good for the Ross School for transforming a trip to Cuba last year into a multidimensional experience.

That said, the exhibit still has some limitations. (We can't expect the show to be as comprehensive as the one at New York University's art gallery, for example, which detailed Cuban life, post-Castro.) Nonetheless, the Ross School's exhibit does not diminish the photographs' highly technical quality or the students' valuable intentions.

Yet the limitations are obvious, perhaps due to an unrealistic conception. For example, the press release from Solar, the exhibiting gallery, stated that these works caught the "passion, inspiration and clear view" of the subject matter. These are moving words, but indicate a nearly impossible task to accomplish with a small exhibit like this one, created by young people who do not have the maturity and time to experience such complexities of Cuban life. (This critic was in Cuba last year, and these complexities still remain ambiguous.)

Perhaps the theme might have been restricted to either children (there were several good portraits by John Messinger) or street scenes (Tiffany Obser captured Havana's deterioration effectively). The most moving pictures, however, were ones with a social/political context: Margaret Yoh's picture featuring an old man (with a cigar in his mouth) looking at a new motorcycle and another one of a small boy looking through a fence.

Was the boy being shut out or shut in? Where were photographs of more affluent Cubans? Where were pictures of the police who were always lurking in the background with their walkie-talkies? These are the kinds of complexities we're talking about that the exhibit title, "Within the Walls of Cuba," does not clearly address. After all, "walls" imply entrapment or perhaps protection. Ambiguity again.

The show will be on view at East Hampton's Solar Gallery until April 15.

Honoring the Artist: Dinah Maxwell Smith

This week's cover artist is a study in contradiction. But Dinah Maxwell Smith seems to relish the apt description. In fact, it's what keeps life interesting for this Southampton resident who enjoys taking risks — and reaping the rewards that come with those risks.

Conversing with the animated and articulate Ms. Smith evokes the first opposition as she recalls her days in Montana when she was a teenage camper working on a cattle ranch. "I remember mending fences as a young woman and never seeing any females. They were all in the kitchen. I said to myself right then and there, ' I'm not spending life in the kitchen cooking for wranglers.'"

On the contrary, Ms. Smith grew up in an entirely different setting, a born – and – bred New Yorker who recalls that her brother was mugged when he was five years old. "It wasn't safe then, either," Ms. Smith recounts.

We can see why the artist was attracted to Montana in her early years and felt compelled to visit it again, most recently last summer. "I went off to find the same ranch where I had been a camper, but it was now a drug rehab center. I did find the people who had run the original camp, however. I plan on going back, but I've decided not to make it home; I have to think about my personal safety in a place that's isolated, although I am looking into the possibility of teaching at the University of Montana."

When I ask if Ms. Smith likes Montana as a reaction to New York's space constrictions, she answers that her family's summer home in Northport provided her with the spatial freedom she loves now. Northport also gave her a romantic sensibility, serving as another contradiction provided by gritty Manhattan streets.

It is this very romantic, nostalgic feeling that informs Ms. Smith's own paintings: an impressionistic style with images of bygone days. The current cover is a good example; a friend of the artist's mother serves as a subject. "I came across this photograph that I couldn't resist. My mother's friend looked incredible. She was a fashion plate." (Her mother had been a fashion editor

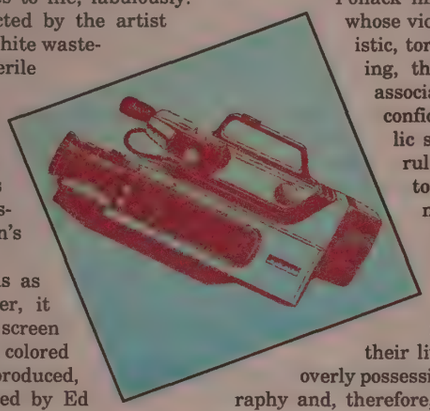
The Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Spring 2002

Pollack

Pollack, the recent film biography of abstract impressionist, Jackson Pollack, is an ideal presentation of East End films, in that it shows the area as ideal for not only filmmaking but, all the arts. In retrospect, it is clear Pollack's work was nurtured by these surroundings.

A massive, blank spread of canvas lies floored and meaningless... in minutes it comes to life, fabulously. Whip-like splashes of color, directed by the artist standing above it, dominates the white wasteland . . . broadcasting art into the sterile conformity. These enlightening moments make it mandatory to see, Pollack, realizing the creative act, as it does, better than the real thing, shot in the 1940's by Hans Namuth, in the small assuming studio in East Hampton's Springs.



Jackson Pollack's true story was as corrosive as his enamels, however, it spills rather ordinarily onto the big screen in small, TV screen-Bio-Pic fashion colored in outlined, numbered forms as produced, directed and wonderfully performed by Ed Harris with admirable and sincere modesty which must be the nature of this fine actor. This may account for some of the vacancies in the film and the man it depicts, since he is in contrast to the actual Pollack image of surly, macho-ambition... whose violent drinking forebode his fatalistic, tortured early demise. Left, standing, though was his uncompromising associate in art and in life... wife and confidant, Lee Krasner, whose metallic strength functioned like the ferrule of a brush that holds the bristles together. Of course, Pollack grew not to rely on brushes alone, Ms. Krasner is portrayed by Marcia Gay Harden, in an Oscar caliber performance.

Here on the East End, with relics of an important part of their lives in out midst, we tend to be overly possessive of the Pollock/Krasner iconography and, therefore, tough critics, However, POLLACK, the movie, resists glorification and more so, almost never spatters sentimentality. Ms Hardin's enactment is a steely foil for Harris' quite cutting portrayal. They raise the perfunctory aspects of the artist's lives out from the obviousness of the short history, so well known by this art-minded community, where Willem de Koonig can just hold his own against walls and walls of paintings of barns. To this end, similarly, Mr. Harris', Pollock holds it own as it recreates the Cedar Bar and Farrell's in Brooklyn, and at replacement brownstones in the Village, for the razed originals where Pollack and Krasner worked and naturally, their ultimate home and workplace here in the Hamptons. Generally, the art scene of the time and it's environments are also fairly well duplicated and we, here in Pollack/Krasner country will not be too upset by this productions treatment. We'll discuss it further, on Saturday.

The film will be shown April 6 at 2 p.m., at Southampton College's Duke Lecture Hall in Chancellor's Hall. (The New Building-at main Parking Area.) Admission FREE. Refreshments Served. Hosted by Guy-Jean de Fraumeni Assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Things Behind The Sun (+)

This is a superb, sleeper film that isn't getting the attention it deserves. I saw it at the Two Boots Pioneer Theater in the East Village, which is similar to the Quad Theater on 13th Street off Fifth Avenue.

Sherry (Kim Dickens) is a singer in a band with two guys. Her current lover is her black manager, Chuck, beautifully acted by Don Cheadle. She is an alcoholic and, for reasons no one can fathom, she has for several years passed out on the lawn of a total stranger. She is arrested for trespassing and given a suspended sentence by the court. Another character, Owen (Gabriel Mann), writes for a music magazine. Flashbacks fill us in on a very traumatic incident that he experienced when he was about fifteen years-old and the victim of that incident, Sherry, who was about the same age. Eric Stoltz has a cameo role as Dan, a bad guy and brother of Owen. He is, as always, a fine actor.

It's worth traipsing to the East Village to see this film and check out the neighborhood. The area, which used to be called Alphabet City, is being gentrified. It has lots of small restaurants, stores and is bustling with people in the evening. It's as safe as most areas in this city, which is to the credit of former Mayor Rudy Giuliani and current mayor Michael Blomberg.

Before Ed Koch was a movie critic for Dan's Papers he was Mayor of New York.

SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE PROUDLY PRESENTS

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

Saturday April 6 - POLLOCK
The critically acclaimed, ultimate East End film by dedicated producer, director and star, Ed Harris, traces the career of artist, Jackson Pollock and the Hampton's environment that nurtured his work. A chance to see it again . . . and discuss it.

Saturday April 13 - ON THE ROCKS
A comedy of coffee, cocktails and carnal lust as a cure for two socialites' headaches of rejection. The background for all the lovely screwball action is, naturally, the gorgeous Hampton's . . . the home of the film's producer, director and star, Heather Buchanan.

Saturday April 20 - WHISPERS IN THE DARK
Murders more than wicked! They are rife with psychopathia sexualis, bondage, sadism and explicit nudity . . . all strung out with chills and thrills. The kinky doings include (would you believe?) nice guy Alan Alda and his extra nice town, Water Mill. Movie starting at 2:30.

Saturday April 27- EVERYONE SAYS I LOVE YOU
Gotta' have a Woody Allen (Hamptons-on-film enthusiast) selection. This is his tuneful tribute to 1940 musicals with a dreamy-team cast of loving couples. Julia Roberts and Woody, Drew Barrymore and Edward Norton, Goldie Hawn and Alan Alda make off-key love, trouble and music as they sing their way through places like New York City, Venice and Southampton.

Saturday May 4 - THE FAN
Film and stage legend, Lauren Bacall's most controversial film. As a Broadway star stalked by an extremely psychotic admirer, Ms. Bacall exhibits both her dramatic and musical talents. Featured are James Garner and Maureen Stapleton and the Hamptons. Movie starting at 2:30.

Saturday May 11 - SHE'S THE ONE
Long Island's own triple-threat film maker, Edward Burn's follow-up of his winning, The Brothers McMullen, delivers more of his sage wit, funny and serious situations and winning performances by Jennifer Aniston, Cameron Diaz and naturally, himself and The Island.

Saturday May 18 - Closed for Graduation

Saturday May 25 - GREY GARDENS
Back by popular demand, this somewhat shocking documentary remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a bit of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onassis) filmed in their decaying, overgrown mansion in East Hampton. A hauntingly memorable experience.

It Don't Mean A Thing, If You Ain't Got That Ring

By Ashley Pinkard

You've suspected for awhile that he might ask you. You've made subtle hints and scrutinized his reaction to carefully positioned comments. Then one day, he bends to one knee and pops the question that makes you squeal with glee. And then you see the ring.

While in most aspects of life, it is undeniable that chivalry is dead, most women still expect a marriage proposal to knock them off their feet. And most men still scratch their heads in confusion as to how to make that happen. The perfect ring is one surefire way.

While it is traditional to make a surprise proposal, it is increasingly taboo to surprise your beloved with a ring. Remember that she will wear this piece of jewelry for the rest of her life and she probably already knows exactly what she wants. The bride should definitely go to pick out her ring.

When purchasing a diamond, you have to consider the 4 C's: Cut, Clarity, Color and Carat. The perfect ring will be based on a combination of these four characteristics.

The cut of the diamond determines its brilliance. The idea is that a diamond cutter places each of the stone's facets and angles in exact geometric relation to each other. To demonstrate the precision required, consider the popular Tiffany-style round-cut diamond. For the round cut, fifty-seven or fifty-eight facets must be perfectly aligned.

Clarity describes how many flaws or imperfections a diamond has. There can be tiny feathers or clouds that show up under a 10-power jeweler's loupe (or microscope), and the appearance of these inclusions determines the diamond's clarity rating. Clarity ranges from "I" or imperfect to "FL" or flawless. It is important to remember that completely flawless diamonds are extremely rare, and clarity is not the most important thing to consider (as these imperfections are invisible to the naked eye).

The color quality of a diamond is extremely important. Almost all diamonds appear colorless to the naked, untrained eye. However, most diamonds have traces of yellow or brown or gray. The color spectrum ranges from light yellow to totally colorless "Z" to "D."

Jack Kelege's Regelia collection available at Mayfair Jewelers

The last of the 4 C's is carat and this is the one most people are familiar with. When you tell your mother that you are engaged, most likely she will ask you how many carats your diamond is. Carat is a measure of the stone's weight. As carats increase, prices increase. Keep in mind that carat is only important if the other 3 C's are high in quality as well.

When potential grooms muster up the nerve to pop the question, they are undeniably going to think about price. There are many places that you can look to find a gorgeous ring at a reasonable price.

If budget is not an issue when choosing a ring (lucky you), the choices are endless.

At London Jewelers in East Hampton they have an exquisite special ladies' platinum engagement ring with a 5.96 carat radiant cut center stone with two shield cut sidestones (1.81 carats combined). This ring retails for $109,900. Call London Jewelers at 631-329-3939.

Gems of the Past in East Hampton features unique antique, estate and other fine jewelry. In the store now is an incredible platinum ring with 4.0 carats of diamonds laid on top. The two bands of platinum "gap" on the finger, *1 "eaving a space between the two arms. The ring retails for $28,000.

Mayfair Jewelers has unique handcrafted platinum and diamond rings from Jack Kelege's Regalia collection. Call Mayfair Jewelers at 631-

Jewelry wholesalers sell rings up to 50% off the list price, which can mean huge savings to the groom. Just make sure that you get a certificate of authenticity that includes the exact size and measurements of the diamonds.

You can get a diamond on most budgets, and as long as it makes both of you happy, the logistics shouldn't really matter. But for those of you who want to see numbers, here are some examples.

A 1/2 carat, 4 prong, 14k solstice solitaire lists for $2995.00, but can be purchased wholesale at $1370.00. The same diamond in a platinum setting can be purchased

The Last Bash

Sometimes it seems like forever since you have had some quality girl time. Real girl time. Doing just what girls do best when they get together – things that guys can't relate to and really don't want to. Maybe it means listening to 80s music at full tilt or just getting your nails done. Sadly enough, these days it's like you need an excuse to get a bunch of your best girlfriends together and hit the town. Schedules get busy; life gets filled with significant others, husbands, families and work commitments and months can go by without a proper girls' night out. You're getting married or maybe it's your best buddy, so it's the perfect time to get a group of gals together and celebrate – it has to be done.

Depending on the bride, the bachelorette party can take all kinds of forms. It can be an all out romping night on the town, a weekend away or a party at home. How risqué is the bride? That is the most important thing to consider. This is her night. This night is all about making the bride-to-be happy. Does she love to be pampered, is she a chic party girl who likes going to all the hot new places in town, is she adventurous? Think about what she loves to do and shape the night around those preferences. The party will be fun no matter what you do, but here are some suggestions to guide you in your party planning.

The Weekend Bachelorette

This is an increasingly popular option for bachelorettes. What better reason to get away for the weekend for a bride-to-be that may be bogged down with wedding plans and pre-nuptial jitters? Especially if you have some time to plan, there are many places that cater to groups looking to celebrate.

One word – Vegas. It's the party capital of America (besides NYC, of course). Sin City. This place is crawling with bachelors and bachelorettes partying to celebrate the end of a friend's singledom. Depending on your group size, you can rent a nice suite at one of the hotels for an affordable price. And flights to Vegas can be reasonable as well – if you get them at the right time. Try America West, Southwest and United for their Weekend Get-a-Way rates. The Hard Rock Hotel is the latest hot spot in Vegas, with its own Nobu outpost, Morton's Steakhouse and its underground nightclub with an apt name - Babies. This hotel is equipped with a huge casino with classic rock music piped throughout (24-hours a day) and a huge guitar-shaped pool. There are private party rooms available to rent if your group wants to roast the bride in private. Find out more information at (www.hardrockhotel.com) or call them at 1-800-HRD-ROCK.

Planning A Party at Home

This can be the most fun. Kick the men out for the evening and have all your best girlfriends over. How long has it been since that happened? Again, think about the bride. What are her favorite foods, what music does she like? Is her style casual or formal? Whether you want to have an evening cocktail party or a weekend brunch, the bride's style is important to consider.

The Night on the Town

Bachelorette parties have been known to get a bit rowdy. When groups of women get together have a few cocktails, and let down their hair, the group behavior can actually start to look a lot like – sorry to say – men's.

Anyway, a fun way to enjoy your evening is to have some sort of game plan when you head out and to have a few surprises in store for the bride throughout the course of the night. It could be dinner at her favorite restaurant, or visiting a bar where she had a really embarrassing experience.

What do New York women love more than "Sex in the City?" Quickly gaining popularity is the "Sex and the City" bachelorette party tour of New York. Run by a young woman who loved to rehash "Sex in the City" episodes with her girlfriends, Georgette Blau guides you around Manhattan in a posh van with cocktails and stops at all of Carrie Bradshaw's hangouts. These party tours are popular so you must book very far in advance. Call them at 1-800-1MAR.

As spring approaches and wedding season gets going, droves of bachelorettes will be hitting the town. Have fun, have a few laughs and be responsible – well, just a bit.

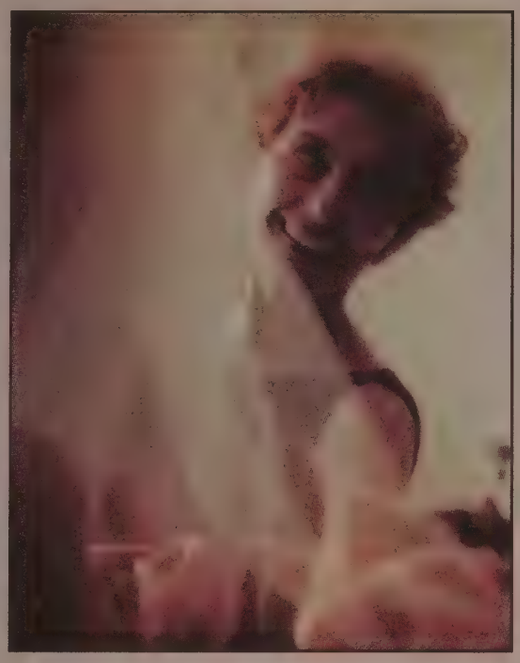
Mother Of The Bride... With Annette

Well Mom, though you have probably imagined the bride's gown in your dreams, chances are you haven't a clue what you are going to wear. Don't worry – today there is no dictate in fashion for mothers of the bride and groom. There is a wide range of choices from minimal and sleek to glamorous and elaborate. As in all fashion, you should wear what looks best on you. The days of the dowdy mother of the bride are thankfully gone for good.



The look could be elegant, sophisticated and modern or all of the above. Modern styles are simple yet luxurious; classic without a dash of the old-fashioned. The presence of Audrey Hepburn and Jackie Kennedy is everywhere. Because today's average bride is 28 and her mother is between 50 and 56, you don't feel old so you shouldn't dress that way.

Remember to flaunt your assets and hide your flaws. It is your day too so don't worry too much about competing with the bride. There is no doubt she will be the most beautiful one at the wedding, no matter what!

If the bride requests you wear a certain color, but you think you look ghastly in the color of her choice, gently ask her if you might wear a different shade. Chances are, she'll agree. If the bride is your daughter, you can be perhaps a little firm? And if she's your daughter-in-law, she'll want to please your son!

Invest in the best your pocketbook allows. For this special day you may even want to splurge a bit. Every fashionable look is abundant at every bridal and department store, and even online, at every price. Bloomingdale's and other national chains create some of the best designer copies around, but many manufacturers offer sensational styling at more reasonable prices.

Beautiful. Elegant. Modern. Timeless. Chic. Words to describe the way you want to look on your child's wedding day. Photographs last forever and so do memories. This is the day you've secretly dreamed about for decades! It won't come again (hopefully) so invest the time and dollars in an outfit you adore.

Some great places online to look: www.sparklesbridal.com, www.plus-size.com, www.alfredsungbridesmaids.com, www.forevermoments.com and www.101bridalgown.com

If a dress isn't comfortable, by all means check out some of the formal and not so formal pants suits. They seem to be the "thing" lately at weddings. There is nothing written in any book of etiquette stating a mother has to wear a gown or dress. I have seen some of the most elegant, feminine, "tux" styles. Some may have some ornamentation on them and some not. Take a look.

There is a wonderful book entitled, The Mother of the Bride:Giving Your Daughter a Wonderful Wedding ($13.26 at www.amazon.com). It encompasses things that a mother may be asked to do. Tasks such as helping pull together the guest list, helping with the seating arrangements, organizing an engagement party, arranging lodging for out-of-town guests, hiring the band and the caterers. Be there for the bride if she wishes; once knee deep in reality she'll welcome your help.

Relax, and have a wonderful day!

10 Questions For Your Caterer

1. How much do you charge per person (in different ranges) and can you break that down into food costs, service costs and rentals? Make sure you see what you are paying for.

2. Is the wedding cake included in that price? Food costs are usually given exclusive of the cake.

3. How do you handle the liquor? Many caterers insist on buying all liquor themselves and then billing you a premium rate. See what you can buy on your own.

4. Does the quoted price include sales tax? Both the food and the rentals can be taxable.

5. Who will be in charge of our party on the wedding day? It is important to know if the same people you dealt with all along will be on-site.

6. What will be done about feeding the band and members of the wedding staff? Very few caterers will provide extra food for free.

7. Is there a charge for wedding consulting? Sometimes knowledgeable caterers and florist will come to your site and discuss an array of wedding-related topics – but the advice may not come for free.

8. May we come to see an affair you have catered? May we have a tasting of the menu? The former is often allowed before a contract is signed and the later after the deposit is received.

9. Will there be any special overtime fees? Is the price of a daytime affair different from an evening function?

10. What are the specifics of the service? Find out the ratio of servers to guests, the number of bartenders and how the gratuity will be handled.

Wedding Planner

If you have never planned a wedding before and you don't even have a clue where to begin, things right now are looking mighty scary. On that big day, everyone will be there to see you and you'll want everything to be just right. The following is a one-year plan to guide you along and let you know what to get done as your wedding day approaches. Piece by piece the wedding plans will come together. You cannot expect everything to happen right away, so plan ahead to avoid the pre-wedding rush.

Twelve to Six Months Before the Day

- Select a wedding date
- Announce your engagement
- Plan an engagement party, if you want to have one
- Agree on a wedding budget – including division of costs
- Talk with a bridal consultant or wedding coordinator
- Find out if there are bridal shows or salons in your area
- Pick and reserve the venue for your ceremony and reception
- Start a wedding guest list
- Start thinking about ideas for your reception and catering plans
- Start shopping for your wedding dress
- Decide who your maid of honor and wedding party will be and begin to shop for their attire
- Select a photographer, videographer, caterer, florist and musical entertainer
- Shop for wedding rings, if you haven't already done so
- Decide on the honeymoon location

Four Months Before the Day

- Check the NY State requirements for the marriage license
- Select your color scheme and discuss it with your wedding coordinator and florist
- Register for your gifts and let your guests know where to go
- Order your invitations, thank you notes and table settings
- Start shopping for the men's wedding attire
- Reserve the wedding day transportation and valet service
- Make your music choices for both the ceremony and reception
- Select a baker and choose a cake
- Prod your mother to get shopping for her dress
- Double-check all of your contracts thus far and confirm dates
- Prepare accommodations for out-of-town guests

Two Months Before the Day

- Pick an engagement picture or have a portrait taken
- Submit an engagement announcement to appropriate publications
- Mail out invitations and announcements
- Make sure the groom's attire is chosen

From Diamonds To Dollars: A Budget For Every Bride

By Ashley Pinkard

Every bride wants her wedding day to be beautiful. From the time a little girl learns to talk, she practices walking down the aisle with Mom's lace tablecloth flowing behind her.

Every woman has a picture in her mind of exactly what her wedding day will look like. Her dress, her hair, her make-up, the flowers, the table settings, the food – every detail is meticulously planned over the course of her life. But when it comes to planning the wedding, brides often find that they are considering dollar figures over the look and feel of the event.

From the extravagant society column weddings to the backyard garden weddings, we have some tips that will make your wedding day too beautiful to forget – regardless of your budget.

There are a variety of options as to where you hold your wedding. There are churches, cathedrals, chapels, temples, synagogues, private homes, gardens, hotels, clubs, halls, parks, museums, yachts, wineries, beaches, hot air balloons and more.

When choosing a site, there are several things to consider, such as the formality of your wedding, the season of the year, the number of guests and your religious affiliation. You must remember that many sites have restrictions regarding photography and videography, music, decorations, candles, rice and rose petal tossing, etc.

If you have a tight budget, consider having your ceremony at the same site as your reception. That way you avoid paying a rental fee for a second site. Being a member of a church, temple or synagogue can sometime reduce the site rental fee.

Set a realistic guest list. Remember that you have to accommodate every guest—in essence you are paying a fee for every person who attends your wedding, so keep the guest list to a minimum if you are working on a small budget. If you are having a garden wedding, consider having guests stand to avoid paying a rental fee for chairs, or try to negotiate the chair rental fee into the ceremony site fee. For flowers and decorations, check to see if there is another wedding at that site on the same day and see if it is possible to split the cost of flowers and decorations with that bride.

If saving money is not your primary concern, go a little crazy. Try to find a site at which you will be the first bride to wed, or check on the availability of some of the glitzy Manhattan hotels or churches. Check out beach resorts or botanical gardens.

The ceremony site rental fee usually ranges from $500.00 to $2500.00, but can be more or less depending on the size of your wedding and the extravagance of the site you have chosen.

Hire a wedding consultant right away. An experienced wedding consultant can take a lot of the stress off the bride, who is already wrestling with the emotions of getting married. Most of the literature on wedding planning claims that a wedding consultant is an essential part of your wedding budget, as he/she is experienced in handling all of the little details of ceremonies and receptions.

But, one way to save money on the ceremony is to forego having a wedding planner. This is only recommended if you can devote all of your time to planning the wedding, however, because it is easy to get overwhelmed by small details. A wedding consultant's fee can range from $400.00 to $3000.00, so consider very carefully whether or not you need to hire one.

If money is no object for you, hire the best wedding consultant in your area. The most highly acclaimed wedding consultant will know the wedding histories of the sites you are considering. He or she will be able to tell you what has been done, so that your wedding will be unique and unforgettable.

Shop around for the site that you have been dreaming of and book far in advance. Ceremony sites can book rather quickly, especially for springtime weddings.

Book your wedding officiant early in the planning stage too, remembering that the priest, clergyman, pastor, rabbi, judge or notary has a life of his or her own, and may not be able to accommodate you on short notice.

Another reason for booking early is that most religious communities have guidelines and requirements, such as premarital counseling and you need to allow enough time to meet whatever requirements your officiant may have. The officiant's fee can range from $50.00 to $500.00, so plan your budget for this accordingly.

All throughout the reception, until that essential moment, the wedding cake will be on display. All of your guests will admire it, discuss its detail and complexity and speculate about the taste. The wedding cake is a very central part of your wedding. In a way, the cake you choose will determine what kind of wedding you are going to have.

You can order a cake from a caterer, bakery, hotel or restaurant. However, you will probably be better off ordering from a professional who specializes in wedding cakes. Ask the baker to see photographs of his work. Many caterers and bakers have Websites where you can peruse galleries of their artistic yummies.

Of course you want your cake to be beautiful, but more importantly, you want it to taste good. Therefore, it is imperative to ask whoever is making your cake for a tasting. It is routine procedure, and experienced bakers will be happy to accommodate you.

You can save money by doing a little bit of research. Some bakers have set up and delivery fees, while others don't. Look for an individual who bakes out of his/her home, as they are usually more reasonable. Also, the caterer you use for your reception might have a contract with a baker, and therefore might be able to pass some savings on to you.

The price of the cake can range from $400.00 to $4000.00, so shop around.

Whatever your budget, your wedding will be magical and beautiful. If you do your research, with wedding planning literature (or software) and plan carefully within your budget, your special day will be unforgettable.

A 3/4 carat diamond in the same solstice 14k setting lists at $7995.00, but can be purchased at a wholesale price of $2299.00, and in platinum or 18k for $2494.00. A one-carat diamond in this setting lists for $9995.00, but wholesale price is $3195.00.

For the more upscale, we found a 1 1/2 carat emerald cut diamond ring in 14k white gold listing for a mere $16,595.00, and wholesaling at $6995.00. This ring is absolutely stunning, and is also available in 18k gold or platinum.

While these rings might make some men shudder, keep in mind that you can get a ring on any budget. If what she wants is too far out of reach for now, consider waiting. Or use a simple, elegant gold band for the ceremony and get the ring later.

You can also consider colored stones or antique rings, which are becoming ever more popular. For colored stones, consult with a gemologist about the fragility of some stones (emeralds do not make good engagement rings). For antiques, have the piece appraised before you purchase. And for any ring, please, please, please get insurance.

This is a once in a lifetime purchase, so take your time. Discuss the budget openly with each other and pick a ring that will make you both happy. You will be seeing that merchandise every day for the rest of your life.

Bridesmaids: A Burden And A Boon

By Ashley Pinkard

When your fiancé first asks you to marry him, you are understandably overcome with emotion. You want to share this moment with the whole world, and invite everyone to share in your happiness. However, if you get caught up in the moment and ask people to be in your wedding party without fully thinking it through, things can get ugly.

Your bridesmaids are there to make your life easier while planning and going through the wedding. However, sometimes dealing with the bridesmaids becomes a full-time job. They feel special that you have asked them to be a part of your wedding, yet, they begin to think this event is more about them than you. They have quarrels with each other about who deserves to be the maid of honor, they argue with you over the order you have them walking down the aisle and who you have paired them with for that walk.

The truth is they probably just want your day to be perfect, but they give you more headaches than hurrahs. The following are some tips that will help minimize the stress induced by your bridal party.

Choose Carefully

Since you consider your wedding a once-in-a-lifetime event, you want every girlfriend you have ever had to be a part of it. It is important to choose your bridesmaids with care, because you really need to depend on them. And that means you need them to be dependable.

Try not to ask several girls that don't like each other, even if you have good relationships with all of them, bridal party rivalries can get ugly. Jealousy will be flying around and your every move will be scrutinized. If you ask one girl to look at dresses and not the other, if your color scheme and bridesmaid dresses are more flattering on one girl than another, you will hear about it.

We all like to think that things like this don't happen, but let's face it: girls are petty. We all know it, and none of us can deny it. So, when you are choosing your bridesmaids, try to minimize the rivalries and include girls that will be happy to plan together. If they are excited and happy about planning for you, you will be much happier through the duration of the wedding.

It is also important to choose carefully when picking your maid of honor. You will ask her opinion on colors, flowers, dresses, cake, food, sites and music(pretty much everything), so choose a maid of honor who is dedicated and dependable. You will thank yourself later.

Do What is Right for You.

The time may come, when you have had enough with one of your bridesmaids. Maybe she complains one too many times. Maybe she blows you off or doesn't show up for something you have planned. It is okay to ask her to decline as a bridesmaid.

The truth is you have to do what is right for you. If you are spending more time upset about her than happy and excited for the upcoming event, then that should tell you something about her being a part of your wedding.

If you are going to ask her to decline, be adult about it. List to her the things that have bothered you, and ask her respectfully to decline. Chances are she knows that she hasn't been a good bridesmaid and if she is really your friend she will understand and still support you. If she is not really your friend, then why is she in your wedding?

Be Gracious

By asking bridesmaids to be in your wedding, you are asking them for a commitment. They all have responsibilities and they are making sacrifices to help you; therefore it is important that you are a gracious bride. It is customary for the bride to buy her bridesmaids gifts. The best gifts are those (such as jewelry) that can be used both during and after the wedding.

It is a good idea to get the same thing for everyone to minimize jealousy. However, it is nice to get the maid of honor something a little different. She has the most responsibilities and by the wedding she will have worked hard for you. If you have been having a problem with jealousy among the girls, get the maid of honor the same gift as the other girls, and then give her a small little token in private or at a separate time, such as at the bridal shower.

All in all, you need to remember that these girls are there for you. They all have responsibilities, and you should be grateful that they have donated their time to you. But do what is right for you. Be open and honest with them, and don't forget, they are your friends – that's why you asked them.

About Face.....with Annette

What makes a bride radiant? Aside from love, joy and running on pure adrenaline, there's the inner glow that comes from knowing that everything surrounding your wedding is perfect and all the details are in place. The outer glow comes from good, conscientious skin care and makeup that suits you perfectly.

From your first footstep down the aisle, to the final bouquet toss, everyone will want to see the bride's face. So your makeup should have enough presence to play up your features across a crowded reception hall, yet be subtle enough to look beautiful close up.

Your wedding makeup should be different from your everyday looks. However, wearing totally different makeup than usual, might make you feel uncomfortable. Hiring a makeup consultant for this important day makes sense. She can guide you on looking your best.

You should schedule appointments with makeup artists four to six months before your wedding. Treat yourself to a full makeover. This way you and the makeup artist can decide what works best ahead of time. By planning ahead, there will be no surprises. You might also want to treat your bridal attendants to makeovers. this can be your gift to them. Most makeup artists offer package deals for the entire bridal party.

Looking Pretty for the Camera

Makeup enhances a face and defines its features, emphasizing the best and down playing the worst .Faces without makeup, on the other hand, appear washed out when photographed

I suggest that brides keep everything matte for a soft finish. These shades absorb rather than reflect light and help minimize shine as well as little lines and imperfections. Eyebrows tend to fade in photographs, so make sure to fill in and define. Tweezing the brow correctly can make the eyes seem larger and open up the whole face. If this is the first time you are tweezing, you may want to have it done professionally.

Eyelashes also tend to fade away in photographs. Bring them out with an extra coat of mascara, making sure that every lash is separated. But first use an eyelash curler to make lashes look longer and eyes look bigger.

It's also a good idea to blend in base, cheek color and eye shadow because any visible makeup lines will seem more prominent in a photograph. Also apply plenty of powder, since flash photography can also make you look shiny. Have a powder compact handy for quick touch-ups.

Looking Radiant

In order to look radiant on your wedding day:

Avoid tanning prior to your wedding so you don't burn and have uneven color. If you do want that sun-kissed glow, try self tanning products before the wedding.

Exfoliate the skin, get plenty of sleep and moisturize skin well before applying makeup.

Brides should wear sunscreen under foundation since so many brides have ceremonies or receptions outdoors.

Make sure you choose products that are long lasting.

If a bride experiences an unexpected flare-up, she should use concealer slightly lighter than her skin tone.

Wear waterproof makeup - just in case you get teary eyed as you exchange "I do's."

To relieve puffy eyes, get the circulation going with light exercise or other energetic activity before showering and applying makeup. Also, try swtiching warm and cool compresses on and off the skin in the sensitive area. Get a good night's sleep and avoid alcohol the night before.

Tips For A Hamptons Country Wedding

By Barbara Williams

Some of the most romantic, sandy white, crystal clear beaches are in the Hamptons. Each year lucky individuals meet someone special that they will be spending the rest of their lives with, plan a wedding and are fortunate enough to get married in the Hamptons.

The Hampton Business Communities and the Chambers of Commerce for each town are experienced and have a wealth of knowledge that is a great source of information to steer you in the right direction as you begin to plan your Hamptons wedding. For 24-hour information, call the Southampton Chamber of Commerce at 631-283-0402 or visit www.southamptonchamber.com for business listings.

Brides and grooms can become completely focused on having an unusual country weekend wedding involving many diversified activities for their guests to enjoy.

#1 LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION

A Hampton Location Specialist is utilized when a couple needs a particular unique wedding site that will incorporate an exquisite outdoor tent by a gazebo/poolside for the ceremony or an oceanfront/bayside indoor reception with a sandy beach ceremony. The smell and sounds of the Atlantic Ocean are breathtaking. You should check with each of the local towns to find out if permits are required and what they are. www.countryweddingonline.com

#2 HAMPTONS CUISINE

Utilizing the ocean and farms to form your menu in the Hamptons, an experienced caterer can integrate fresh produce and fresh fish into your appetizers, salads, main course and desserts. An upscale caterer will incorporate the bride and groom's ethnic backgrounds into the cuisine. (www.RobbinsWolfe.com)

Some weddings are casual and opt for the old fashion clam bake with local clams, mussels, striped bass, baked potato, corn on the cob and fresh bread.

(www.hamptonclambake.com)

#3 HAMPTON WEEKEND ACCOMMODATIONS

Private estate sites are available for the weekend, weekly or year-round. There are locations near the rich and famous on secluded estates near the ocean or beach settings. There is a plentiful number of bedroom suites with impressive entertaining spaces which incorporate perennial gardens, beach grasses and poolside lounging. A true country setting. (www.hamptonminiestates.com)

#4 FARM FLOWERS

The local farmstands in the Hamptons have the most beautiful and colorful fresh cut flowers daily that can be displayed as a centerpiece on your table. Flowers will enhance the setting and provide for a colorful background incorporating a fresh scent in the atmosphere.

#5 THE HAMPTONS VINEYARD

Some of the vintages available in the Hampton are Chardonnay, Cabernet Sauvignon, Riesling and Merlot. You should sample the wines before you serve them at your wedding. Some Hampton vineyards will even deliver anywhere in New York State. (www.duckwalkvineyards.com

#6 BED AND BREAKFAST

Most guests will experience a full weekend when in town for the country wedding. They may stay at a friend's private home, bed and breakfasts, hotels or motels. There are many lodging options and it is nice to think ahead about what your guests would most enjoy.

#7 TROLLEY CARS

A trolley car is a fun type of transportation. You can transport your guests from their guest accommodations to the wedding site. Your guests can enjoy themselves since they do not have to worry about driving. (www.longislandtrolley.com)

#9 MUSIC AND THEME

Music on steel drums enhances the Hampton beach atmosphere. Some weddings rent vintage radios from the 30's, 40's, 50's, 60's, 70's to add to the decor. Other weddings rent old time TV's and play tapes of family activities. Many brides and grooms make up their own CDs as gifts to their guests. (of the music from their wedding)

#10 THE BAKER

If you see it in a magazine chances are it can be reproduced even if it is an unusual wedding cake design. All natural farm ingredients are used to make delicious cookies, decorated cakes, brownies, scones, breads, and wedding cakes. And the East End bakers are noted for their unusual wedding cake designs. I have seen a five-foot vanilla and chocolate cream puff wedding cake. You can incorporate the favorite flavors and hobbies from both the bride and the groom. You can also order cookies and have them delivered to your doorstep.

#11 VIDEO ARTISTRY

You can capture all the fun of your wedding without ever taking the focus off of you. You will receive breathtaking quality, superior editing and capture moments of a life time all in the Hamptons.
(www.victoriastudios.com)

As the sun sets in the Hamptons, outdoor lights can be uniquely displayed throughout the tent or multi-decks surrounding the party. Multi-level candles can accent the table into the evening hours. Family pictures can be displayed to your guests as they enter the reception site to give it a "home feeling." Remember to write down all of your ideas and expand on your thoughts especially from your most creative members of your family. Make your Hampton wedding a unique event that everyone will enjoy and remember.

The Time Machine

The short waiting time for TIME and TIDE has real meaning here on our valued WASH n' WEAR shores, where sweet spumante waters wear away at the luxury-itemized real estate. In movie making, however, TIME and TIDE are simply RINSE cycles for popular-movie-remakes or, a quick SPIN around to sequels that keep getting washed up onto the beaches after a cathartic, TIDE detergent laundering that leaves the original as thin as the skeletal remains of the three additional Jaws.

The "this-time-around," version of H.G. Wells', The Time Machine, has the far-thinking Mr. Wells' work, so corrosively scavenged, it is obviously sanitized for children or adults allergic to literate thought and, therefore, given to the digitized, computer workers whose talents create imaginative fantasy images to flesh-out the picked-clean-to-the-bone subject. Since the so-called "flesh" is merely pixelation....there is no meat for that matter (or lack of matter) the images concocted are tryingly familiar at this time of Time and Again...and, again...and, again...and again. They need some new discs!

Guy Pierce (talk about no meat on the bones...give the man a steak, already!) is a fine performer but, as the purposeful genius who devises a machine to take him backward and forward in time, he too soon loses purpose, and, he and the move, get nowhere, except into the usual adventure film chases. Among others warped in time is Jeremy Irons, caught dead in cruelly white Frankenstein make-up...but oh, that red lipstick!

The director, Henry Jaglom, has taken the waters here. You've seen him... he wears a funny little hat but, more importantly he made Last Summer In The Hamptons, here in 1995. (A Hollywood director would have made it in Yugoslavia.) It featured the magnificent, Vivica Lindfors, and it combined show business friends, actors and lovers and their theatrical emotions in high improvisation, set into motion by his story line script. He now has moved his style to France's Festival in Cannes, where he's cast some other formidable talents...Anouk Aimee and Maximillian Schell who give the film some authentic Zotz! That film season on the Cote d'Azur attracts man (and woman) eating sharks. Their deal making attacks show some real red blood, 'til the sentiments of sex, strong language but weakened convincingness leaves them prey to predators like critics...Like me. Chomp!

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/ writer/ director of award winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

But Ms. Smith isn't necessarily stuck on nostalgia. Currently, she is painting animals, another entirely different subject matter. While her style is still impressionistic, Ms. Smith has a personal penchant for horses, cats and dogs. She is learning to ride (overcoming adult fears that she didn't have as a youngster), and she's been a very proud pet owner for years. And at the present time has two orange cats (Maine coons), a white cat and two chinchillas. "I let the chinchillas loose to run up and down the stairs when the cats are elsewhere," she adds with a laugh. "It's like a circus around here.

"When I see an animal (especially dogs), my heart melts," Ms. Smith confides. It's apparent to us that Ms. Smith has her heart in just about everything she paints.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Emilio De Carlo along with his son Beto, are the proprietors of Ragazzi, a Northern Italian restaurant, just one block south of the Bal Harbour shops in Surfside, Florida. While visiting the area this winter we enjoyed some of the best and most authentic Italian food in this small, 45 person, corner restaurant.

Ragazzi, meaning boys in Italian, include Beto, Emilio's son, a young nephew and several friends who maintain the standard of excellence, the consistency of food and the quality of service with respect for price, the hallmark of the restaurant. Born in Florence, Italy Emilio de Carlo came to United States when he was 3 years old and would continue the family tradition of 3 generations of chefs. Their concept is to respect and concentrate on the basic ingredients so fundamental to Tuscans — no overly fancy garnishes or prissy decorated plates — just pure, simple and vibrant food.

One night at dinner four of us shared their signature stuffed artichoke, a flowerlike creation served in a garlicky broth. We scraped our teeth over each leaf, drawing in the moist crumb stuffing and sopping up every bit of the delicious parsley flecked broth with crusty rolls until there was nothing left but the gnawed leaves on our plates. When the waiter asked if we were done, my sister responded with, "If you don't remove the plates we might eat them too."

Ragazzi serves up some of the best pastas in town such as pappardelle with imported fist-sized fresh porcini mushrooms laced with porcini truffle oil and a marvelous red snapper filet with capers in a fresh tomato and lemon sauce. Grandma De Carlo, La Nona, Emilio's mother, prepares a short but delicious list of desserts.

Ragazzi draws a crowd nightly. Diners gather around the glass front circular corner of the restaurant and will wait almost any length of time to dine there. There is a bonus however. Beto, with his Valentino handsome smile, is there to greet you with kisses and a glass of wine. The boy has a gift says his father and indeed he has. Beto's greeting makes the wait worthwhile.

RAGAZZI'S STUFFED ARTICHOKE

A flowerlike creation in a garlicky broth.
An appetizer to serve 2 or 4 or more?

2 jumbo globe artichokes, about 8-9 oz. each
Halved lemon

For the stuffing:

4 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 cloves garlic, minced
2 anchovies, chopped
4-5 tablespoons toasted breadcrumbs, preferably homemade
1 tablespoon capers, rinsed
1/4 cup coarsely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
2 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese
3-4 cups chicken broth

To finish:

1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1-2 cloves garlic, finely minced
2-3 tablespoons coarsely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
1/2 cup broth

1. Cut off artichoke stem end evenly so artichoke can stand. Discard bruised leaves at the base then cut off points of each leaf with kitchen shears, spiraling the vegetable to about 1-inch from the top. Lay the vegetable on its side and, with a serrated knife, make a sharp straight cut and discard the upper portion. Separate leaves with your thumbs and pull out the purple leaves from the center to expose the fuzzy choke. Scoop out the choke with a melon ball cutter or grapefruit spoon. Rinse clean then squeeze halved lemon over the exposed surfaces. Repeat with remaining artichoke.

2. For the stuffing heat oil in a skillet and saute the garlic for 40-50 seconds, being careful not to brown. Stir in the anchovies then breadcrumbs to thoroughly coat. Add capers, parsley and cheese. Stir to mix and remove from heat. Taste for seasoning.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

3. Stand artichokes up and carefully spread leaves for stuffing. Spoon a little stuffing inside each row of leaves starting at the bottom and put about 1 tablespoon in the cavity. Repeat with second artichoke. Place artichokes in a deep Pyrex or ceramic baking dish just large enough to hold them. Pour in enough broth to come about 1/3 the way up the sides of the artichokes. Cover securely with aluminum foil and bake about 1 hour or until a leaf pulls away easily when done. Transfer artichokes to 2 soup plates.

4. Heat olive oil and saute garlic for 30-40 seconds. Add parsley and stir to mix. Add 1 cup broth and heat through. Spoon cooking liquid equally around each artichoke. Serve at once.

RAGAZZI'S PASTA WITH ASPARAGUS, TOMATO AND BASIL

A savory and timely interpretation of Emilio de Carlo's recipe.
Serves 4-5

1 pound thin asparagus
1-2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt

For the pasta:

1 pound linguine
Coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water

For the sauce:

1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
2 large cloves garlic cut into slivers
5-6 ripe plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
About 20-25 fresh basil leaves, cut into julienne

1. Break off bottom part of asparagus where they naturally bend and discard. With a sharp paring knife cut away and discard the points along the spears or peel with vegetable peeler. Soak asparagus in a bowl of cold water about 15-20 minutes. Drain and cut the asparagus into 1-inch pieces. Blanche asparagus pieces in a saucepan of boiling salted water for 2 minutes. Drain and refresh under cold water to stop the cooking. Pat dry in a clean kitchen towel. Can be done ahead.

2. Bring a large pot of water to the boil, add 1-2 tablespoons coarse salt and put in the pasta. Cook the pasta at boiling about 8 minutes or until al dente, firm to the bite. Drain in a colander, reserving 3 tablespoon cooking water for the sauce and return to the pot the pasta cooked in (it stays warm this way).

3. While the pasta is cooking heat olive oil in a skillet and saute garlic for 30-40 seconds, being careful not to brown. Add tomato, salt and pepper to taste and simmer for 2-3 minutes. Put in the asparagus and reserved cooking water and cook for another 2-3 minutes. Stir in the basil and remove from heat. Transfer the sauce to the pasta and toss vigorously to mix. Serve on warm plates and drizzle with a fine extra-virgin olive oil if desired.

Dan's Papers 1st Annual Pizza Essay Contest Results

Well, Dan's Papers 1st Annual Pizza Essay Contest has drawn to a close and the results were impressive. We received piles of essays, some from kids, some from big kids one or two from dogs. There were a few people who had trouble counting to forty (which was the word limit for the contest) and, curiously, we had a few enteries in the same handwriting with different names on each entry. But overall, folks played fair and followed the rules and below are some of the best essays and poems. The winner is listed last.

Francesca's!
The pizza sauce drips down smoothly,
Can't stop once for a breath,
One slice is never enough,
And every time it's just right,
All over my fingers,
Covered with toppings
With an mmm soft, soft, crust
Francesca's makes
Pizza to perfection
Each and everytime!

Dining in The Hamptons

Side Dish
By Aji Jones

The "best bartender in New York City" has come to the Hamptons! Leonard Pagliaro, the brand new bartender at Peconic Coast, was voted Best Bartender in New York City by the 2000 Editor's Choice Awards of citysearch.com. He's got over thirty years of bartending and bar managing experience at Mike & Tony's in Brooklyn, Lenny's Steaks & Chops in Howard B each and Ye Olde Limehouse in Manhattan, to name just a few. Looks like you can expect Peconic Coast's bar scene to really heat up this season. Right now, they're also offering two specials at the bar: for $16 you can choose two appetizers off the menu or for $21 you can have two appetizers and a drink.

North Fork news...Bedell Cellars has just released their 1998 Cupola and it's a winner – Kip Bedell has done it again. The 1998 Cupola (named after the cupolas atop the Bedell winery), is an elegant, well-balanced Bordeaux-style blend of Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc and Merlot. Marvelous full flavors are entwined throughout, with strains of oak, spice, and mint, all leading to a very smooth finish. In the 1998 Cupola, you will taste plum, black currant, cherry and raspberry joined with mint and oakey undertones. Try it with lamb, grilled meats, duck and rich stews. It's $27.50 a bottle or $220 a case. You can find it in area stores, at Bedell Cellars on Main Road in Cutchogue and through their web site at www.bedellcellars.com.

The kudos for the Southampton Publick House just keep coming. Recently, they were awarded both a Gold and Silver medal at the 2002 Real Ale Festival in Chicago. "Southampton Biere de Garde" captured the gold medal and "Southampton Abbot 12°" was awarded the Silver Medal in the Belgian & Specialty Ales category. "Southampton Bier de Garde" was also named first runner up in the "Best of Show" judging. Congratulations!

Now here's one not to miss: The Maidstone Arms will host a guest chef series in May and June featuring Drew Niepiront's Myriad Restaurant Group. The dinners will be hosted on Sundays: May 5, May 19, June 2, June 16, and June 30. The dinners will feature a five-course meal prepared by chef's from the groups restaurants (watch this space for details on the chefs!). Selective wines will be paired with each course from their extensive selection by wine connoisseur Jarvis Wilcox in East Hampton. All dinners start at 6:30 p.m. with wine and hors d'oeuvres in the water room. The dinners are $75 per person.

It's still a little cold out for people-watching from the outdoor tables at Babette's, but here's another reason to lunch there in the meantime: Owners Barbara Layton and Daniel Van Der Beek are offering tapas now during lunch hours. For $14.95 you can select any two items with cold noodle salad and Asian slaw: chicken tenders with honey mustard, Vietnamese spring rolls, panko crusted cod with curried yogurt sauce, Shanghai mushroom dumplings and chicken satay with Thai peanut sauce. Yum!

Nick & Toni's will host a wine dinner featuring D'Artagnan game such as whole roasted foie gras and Muscovy duck on April 12. Call the restaurant at 324-3550 for details.

If you haven't been to Painter's in Bellport, go! They have great eclectic American cuisine, in an eclectic and artsy space - it looks like an artist's loft. And, they have live music on weekends. Coming up on their April calendar: Friday, April 5 is "Verdict," Saturday, April 6 is "70's Experience." Friday, April 12 features "Street Player" and Saturday, April 13 is "Only in America." The music starts at nine. Call 286-6264 for dinner reservations.

There's still plenty of time to take advantage of Della Femina's popular $24 pre-season prix fixe. And you don't even have to eat at six o'clock - you can get it all evening Sunday through Thursday. There are three courses with a choice of three selections at each course as well as a featured wine for $6 a glass.

Dining in The Hamptons

Italian and Mediterranean inspired dishes fill the menu as glorious sunsets reflected in the pond shine through the windows at Harvest on Fort Pond in Montauk. Generous portions are swiftly served, family-style by an amiable wait staff. The views are more than worth the price of the food and the open dining room makes it seem as if you are dining among a large group of friends.

Enjoy a glass of wine in the comfortable lounge or have a cocktail in the garden. The massive wine list is sure to please even the most finicky wine connoisseur with bottles priced between $24 and $250. If you can't finish a whole bottle, wine by the glass and half bottle are $7 and $12 respectively.

Grilled marinated lamb ribs are succulent, spicy and sweet and make a great starter. The bruschetta is more like sliced and seasoned tomatoes piled high over toast and sprinkled with mozzarella, while the seafood bruschetta is a pleasing assortment of clams, mussels and scallops in a light sauce. Patrons were cleaning their plates of grilled duck caesar salad. Other appetizers include pan seared tuna, grilled asparagus, lobster cakes, fried green tomatoes, and panchetta braised octopus. Prices for appetizers and starters are $9-$34.

Grilled pizzas topped with bacon, onion, jalapeno, tomato and mozzarella or Gorgonzola, sausage, broccoli and tomato are sure to appease both young and old. The yummy spinach, mushroom, artichoke and mozzarella pizza was piled so high with toppings it is hard to get it all in my mouth.

Harvest
11 South Emery Street
631- 668-5574

Big salads also serve as entrees, try the calamari salad with red pepper vinaigrette or the grilled Portobello with crispy goat cheese and mixed greens.

Garlic shrimp and spaghetti combine two well prepared elements, seafood and pasta. The light sauce was tasty and the shrimp was covered with flecks of garlic. Pasta offerings include farefale with sausage and peas, rigatoni with lamb and broccoli, fussily with bacon, scallops and mushrooms, and penne with sautéed mushrooms, asparagus and Marscapone cheese. The pasta dishes will serve a small army, so order accordingly.

Main dishes offer hearty fishes and meats. A woman at the next table ordered the roast pork with a hazelnut crust and Grand Mariner sauce and raved all night. If you are up for meat check out the whole sizzling red snapper, lamb t-bone with polenta and escarole, wine marinated and hazelnut topped pan seared swordfish, or the grilled salmon with cucumbers, dates and walnuts. For those of us ailing for the norm grilled chicken and porterhouse steaks are also on the menu. Side dishes of a seasonal vegetable, garlic mashed potatoes, spinach with mushrooms or seasoned fries can be added. Prices for entrees range from $12-$40 and portions are large enough to serve two or more.

The dessert menu is full of mouth watering choices and completed by offerings of port and grappa. The chocolate fondue is fun and romantic. It comes with marshmallow, strawberries, honeydew melon, pineapple, and banana bread for dipping–be careful it is hot. My favorite is the fruit ice cream sandwich that comes as a two-layer treat. The sweet thin wafers are filled with light vanilla ice cream, strawberries, blueberries, kiwi, honeydew melon and pineapple lightly topped with chocolate syrup and whipped cream. Other tempting treats are amaretto cheesecake, chocolate torte with white chocolate ice cream, tiramisu, and cream puffs. Be sure to pair with the proper dessert wine for fullest flavor.

Chef John Weston combines herbs and vegetables from the garden and the freshest seafood in all of Montauk to create this spectacular cuisine. Come sample his creations at Harvest on Fort Pond, located at 11 South Emery Street. Call 668-5574 for reservations and you can view an abbreviated menu online at www.harvest2000.com. –Diane Guest

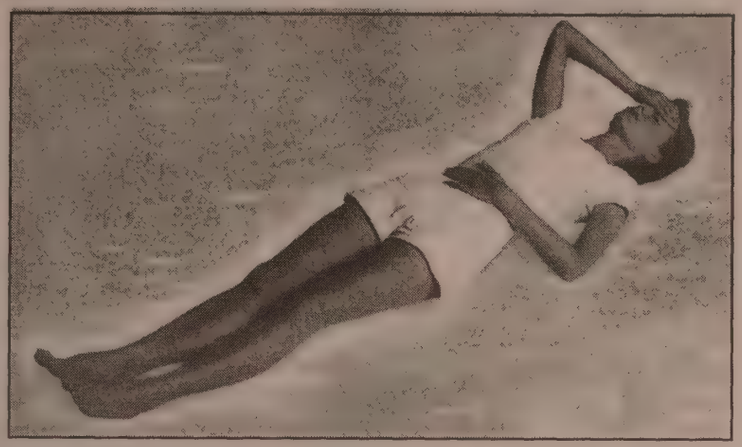
Reiki : An Alternative Approach To Health And Healing

The hands of the practitioner feel reassuring nurturing and safe. You close your eyes and surrender to the warm wave of relaxation flowing through you, aware only of the graceful, gentle hands of the practitioner as she moves from one position to another. And with music playing softly in the background and the subtle aroma of eucalyptus and pine, your senses weave a magnificent tapestry of sounds and feelings. You can feel your heart rate slowing; your breathing is deep and rhythmic. The feeling of complete calm and well-being envelopes you like a giant, soft cocoon. Your mind empties of mental chatter while the day's stress, tension and anxiety seem to melt through the soles of your feet.

After the session, you might open your eyes and recall that you've been sharing the experience in a room filled with other guests; or that you've been lying down enjoying a table treatment that, in a mere half-hour, restored, refreshed and renewed your mind, body and spirit.



These descriptions are some of the experiences of Reiki, a 2500 year-old healing art and science. Reiki is a Japanese word: Rei meaning universal life force, the energy inherent to all creation, and Ki meaning the individual's vital energy necessary for sustaining life. Reiki integrates the Rei (Universal Life Force) with personal Ki to enhance, restore balance and stimulate natural healing. Its principles are based on the same traditional energy theory followed by acupuncture and Shiatsu massage that incorporate the system of energy centers (Chakras) and pathways (Meridians or Nadis) running through the body. The difference is that Reiki is non-manipulative and non-invasive, requiring only the gentlest touch. Through loose clothing a Reiki practitioner channels universal life force energy through the hands, helping to direct the energy to where it is needed.

As mind/body medicine (known as CAM – complementary and alternative medicine) continues to become an ever-increasing factor in total healthcare, Reiki is emerging as the complementary healing modality of choice. It is simple to understand and its principles are compatible with personal values and beliefs. It provides the elements of choice and control, fulfilling a desire for participation in personal healthcare. As a gentle hands-on treatment method, Reiki is proven as an effective technique that complements all traditional medical and non-medical treatments. There are no contraindications. Reiki is a source of deep relaxation - reducing stress, anxiety and pain.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

It stimulates natural healing and enhances immune system function, resulting in faster recovery time, decreased medication and increased energy and vitality. Recipients of Reiki report experiencing better sleep, less anger and depression, reduced pain, optimized healing, and general feelings of well-being.

Reiki is a treatment method that can also be used to improve and enhance overall wellness and quality of life. Reiki as a spiritual discipline is rooted in the fundamental principles that generate unconditional, non-judgmental love to the self first then inspire service and community activism. It is observed that Reiki's empowering benefits enhance self-esteem, self-worth and self-care so that individuals experiencing Reiki become their own best advocates and healers.

Complementary mind/body modalities like Reiki are not reimbursed or covered by health insurance companies. Many people forgo these valuable treatments simply because they cannot afford them or do not have the opportunity to explore their applications. Therefore, it is the objective of the Center of Living Light, a local nonprofit organization, to make the mind/body/spirit benefits of REIKI available to all East End residents.

Reiki can be experienced three ways:

1) Learn to use it for yourself and family. Reiki is one of few modalities that can be used to self-treat. Anyone can learn to use this gentle yet powerful technique at one of the classes scheduled monthly.

2) Receive a mini-session from a professionally trained practitioner by attending a free Living Light Reiki Community Circle, or make an appointment for a table treatment at our donations-only Reiki Clinic (funded in part by the Town of Southampton).

3) Become a Reiki practitioner at Reiki Circles and Clinics. When you give a Reiki treatment, you receive a treatment at the same time.

Living Light Reiki Community Circles have been held every Tuesday at the Westhampton Free Library for almost seven years (June 4 is the official anniversary) and at the Riverhead Free Library on the 2 and 4 Thursday of every month. Both events are scheduled 7 to 9 p.m. Registration is unnecessary; friends and family are welcome! Sessions at the Living Light Reiki Clinic are preferably by appointment, although walk-ins are welcome. The primary location is Southampton Hospital, every Saturday from 10a.m. to 1 p.m. (the last session is at 12:30). Satellite sites are located at the Pain Management Center at Southampton Hospital, Twin Forks Hematology Oncology in Riverhead, the Rogers Center in Southampton and, soon, at the health clinic of the Shinnecock Nation.

Dr. Robin Lechner, ND, RM – Founder and President of the Center of Living Light is available to answer questions at 728-4173. For Clinic appointments, call Peter Polakiewicz at 369-2016. For directions to the Reiki Circles, please call the respective library.

Book Review: Beach Houses – Elements Of The Ultimate

What is it that draws us to the beach? Is it the comfort of sticking our feet in the sand and curling our toes? Or is it the satisfying silence that drops all around us, a muting of the world by the sound of the water smacking against itself and crashing into the sand? Or maybe it is just the need to get away from city life and get back to the basics of nature. In Beach Houses, Roberto Schezen and Michael Webb address what it is about the beach that we love so much and why we build our houses there. From Santa Monica, California to Montauk, Schezen and Webb give a visual and editorial walk-through tour of some of the most extravagant beach houses in the country.

What makes a beach house great? Why, the beach of course! But the beach is about all the twenty-one houses in Beach Houses have in common, with each house creating its own unique relationship to the water for its owner. That and the uniqueness of their designs, anyway. Today a beach house is not the same, basic living structure it once was. Now it can offer the same comforts as a city home, but with maybe a little more room for taste. And the Hamptons, of course, has a draw all its own.

"What makes the Hamptons so desirable," writes Webb, "is their combination of remoteness and sophistication. And for every pretentious McMansion, there's a relic from the days when this was farming country, full of barns and windmills, with a few modestly scaled summer homes."

Beachfront property can be expensive though, and there is always the risk of losing your home during a bad storm or hurricane. There are not many who can afford both the cost and the risk, and fewer still who can put together a structure that will be both comforting and endearing. But funding doesn't tend to be a problem in the Hamptons, and the houses pictured in Beach Houses transcend all the factors of cost, risk and design.

Montauk Eothen, Rolf Bauhon, 1931

"Looking back at (the Sagaponack Villa More) house from the water, it is easy to imagine that a group of artists decided to pool their recourses and live side by side in a row of structures, each of which expressed a different, quirky personality. And yet they come together as naturally as the scattered buildings of a New England Farm."

The Holzer house in Southampton is more of a retreat than anything else, a place for Jane Holzer to relax and unwind. It is right on the water, "a true sand-between-the-toes beach house." The most intriguing aspect of the house though, is the warmth that emanates from it. In the main picture from Schezen, you can see a two-story house with shingles on the roof and sides, big windows bordered in white, a closed terrace upstairs and an enormous wood deck that juts out right into the sand, with plenty of patio furniture to boot.

The Brillembourg House in Sagaponack was once a barn – two barns actually. With the added garage, master bedroom, pool and pool house, however, it is anything but a barn now. Buying a field that neighbored the property allowed Atilio Brillembourg to put in the largest trees he could find and increase his seclusion from whatever might be around the house, so while on the

Spring Is In The Air : Time To Get Out Of The Closet

For weeks it had bothered me. I tried to avoid thinking about my disorganized closet by just keeping the door shut at all times, but the weather was turning warmer and my bulky sweaters were taking up too much room. Sweaters mixed in with T-shirts and a monster pile of jeans. Each time I had to pull something out, I was perpetuating an even larger mess.

So, Sunday I decided to tackle the mess. I realized this could be fun; it did not have to be a chore and there were things in my closet just asking to be thrown away. If you follow some simple rules as you attempt to organize your messy closet, things will be a lot easier.

1. Start with the basics. The key to an organized closet is to start with your most basic pieces and build around them. For me, white T-shirts from last season are the number one place to start. Yellow-pitted T-shirts are not attractive; throw them away and head straight to the Gap in Bridgehampton ($12.99) to replenish your supply.

2. Old pilly bathing suits bought in the last century must go. If the seat on these swimsuits seem thin and threadbare now, it's guaranteed they will not be any better by summer. These things can create disarray in your closet, get mismatched and by the summer, will probably just get pushed to the back of your closet anyway. Get rid of them now, keep your fun suits from last summer and say bye-bye to the rest.

3. Old and bent hangers that you have accumulated from the cleaners make for a disorganized and cluttered closet. Invest in some uniform hangers. This simple step can make miles of room in your closet and keep your clothes from getting wrinkled. Kmart in Bridgehampton sells packs of three ($1.99). It is a good idea to get both shirt and pants hangers depending on your wardrobe, because the right hanger can make a big difference in managing your space.

4. The two-year rule applies: if you never wore something last summer, and couldn't even think of being seen in it now, get RID of it. Chances are this will not change. Old pieces like this become an eyesore in your closet and take up way too much room. That wrap floral skirt that you haven't worn in years will not be missed.

5. Tattered shoes and smelly sneakers are malodorous and they take up too much room. Boots that have been repaired one too many times and have seen too many property you might still get that secluded feeling of still being on a farm.

Most beach houses in the Hamptons do not offer the same house-to-beach closeness that a home in southern California or Florida might. As illustrated by Schezen and Webb, the five houses pictured shown from southern California are "among the beachiest." But because of the way the Hamptons has developed over the years, you will not find the same urbanized beaches as you will in southern California either. The Hamptons in general are more of an escape valve from the city, whereas in southern California the beaches are part of the city and are the only parts that provide any real release.

Schezen and Webb do a wonderful job illustrating the beauty and structure of the different beach houses in the book. The pictures are well-lighted, give great angles to various rooms and offer a permanent picture of what a beach house should be like. Webb's writing is the perfect complement to the pictures, carefully describing the houses and their rooms and the aura that comes off them. There is unfortunately, only so much room in a book like this, so you get the feeling that they were unable to show or write everything they wanted. Nonetheless, if you are looking to buy or build a new beach house, Beach Houses is a good stepping stone for learning what to look for and what to see.

seasons of mud and dirt are ready to be thrown away. Keep one pair for gardening or wearing in the rain and trash the rest.

6. Is denim wearing you down? There is something to be said for old jeans, but we all do not need ten pairs of jeans! If your jeans are old, worn, and have too many holes to wear even in front of your family, they need to be made into rags or shorts for working around the garden. Keep a few of your favorite pairs that make you feel slim and comfy and get rid of the rest. Your mindset should be, "less is more."

7. If you aren't saddened by the thought of getting rid of something, then it should go. Cleaning your closet should be uplifting. If you love something and cannot bear to part with it, keep it for another year and see how you feel.

8. Be clean. This is the perfect opportunity to pull out some of your wrinkled shirts and wash and press them. A clean closet is an orderly closet; just think of how great that crisp white button-down will look compared to something that looks like it has been under your mattress for six months.

9. Ask a specialist. Head over to The Closet Factory and talk to them about the best organizers for your closet. If you are a shoe horse they may recommend something to hang or store under your bed.

10. When you are finished with your spring-cleaning you should have a nice big pile to give away. Trash the stuff that is irreparable and call the Salvation Army in Riverhead (631-727-1571) or the Red Cross in Southampton (631-283-8336) to find out where you can take your donations. –Jessica Romm

POLICE BLOTTER

Like something out of a scary movie, a Noyac resident discovered last week that her phone lines had been cut. She ran next door to a neighbor's house on Hartwell Lane to call police. There are no suspects at this time.

A young woman went to the max last Friday stealing seven items of clothing from the TJ Maxx store in Bridgehampton. Store security witnessed the thefts and called Southampton Town Police. The cops arrived and arrested the 23-year-old woman for misdemeanor petit larceny.

A Patchogue resident was arrested on Montauk Highway in East Hampton Town last Sunday after police found him passed out behind the wheel of his car. While investigating the vehicle, police discovered a girl 100 yards down the road who lay unconscious after her night of partying. An ambulance was called and she was taken to Southampton Hospital. As for the dysfunctional driver, he was arrested for DWI and received a felony-level charge of aggravated unlicensed driving.

Whitmore's Tree Farm in Amagansette was robbed of $117 and suffered a broken window last week. The culprit thought she had out-witted her former employers, but police eventually caught up to her later that night after a strange sequence of events. The 34-year-old Sag Harbor woman became wanted after she assaulted an acquaintance. A man called police stating that she had just punched him in the face and chest before smashing the window of his truck. After the report was made, local police units were told to be on the look out. While on patrol, a Sag Harbor officer pulled the woman over and arrested her for DWI. While in custody, all the reports were put together and it was discovered that she had robbed Whitmore's, punched her "friend" and his truck, and then drove off after a few to many.

Buzz Chew Chrysler Dodge suffered a big blow sometime last Friday night. The sales manager contacted police the following morning after discovering three de-wheeled vehicles on wooden blocks. The Dodge truck and the two Chrysler sedans were jacked up sometime between 7p.m. that Friday and 8 a.m. the next morning. Police have no suspects.

Mama mìa! Someone stole the "No Parking Tutto Bene" sign from the Tutto Bene II restaurant in Bridgehampton.

A backhoe got the backhand from some punk vandals last Thursday after he, she, or they decided it was a good idea to throw some rocks through the front window. The owner, Swimming Pools by Jack Anthony in Southampton, reported the incident.

Police in East Hampton came upon an abandoned BMW on Flaggy Hole Road last Saturday. The car was left, stuck in the sand, with all the windows broken. Investigation told police that the roughed-up ride belonged to a Manhattan resident. Local law enforcement contacted the NYPD with negative results (damn city folk don't even notice their Beemer's gone).

The computer tech at The Ross School reported to police on March 25 that a Dell laptop computer worth $2,500 was missing since mid January. The laptop is loaded with various software and its whereabouts remains unknown.

And finally, those damn kids are up to no good again. This time an East Hampton resident called police when he discovered his mailbox taped shut. He told cops that other mailboxes had been tampered with along with a Cablevision cable box. Police are patrolling the area more frequently.

Dan's LETTERS

FEWER NIGHT LIGHTS = HAPPY BIRD FLIGHTS
Dear Dan,

In "A Religious Experience" you present the idea that the "Tribute in Light" should continue for another ten years at least. While I accept the fact that this temporary memorial has brought comfort to many, I beg to differ about any notion of its long-term presence. I have a problem with the idea of 616,000 watts (enough to power 200 homes,) being pointed straight up into NYC's already light polluted sky. This wasted energy is of course derived from already depleted fossil fuels.

Where do you think we get those from? Shouldn't this "Tribute" actually be named "Cash Cow for the Axis of Evil"?

Further, I'm sure you are aware that there are folks from the FAA and NYC Audubon Society monitoring the memorial full time, so that it can be turned off for air traffic and to protect the avian population.

This is a serious consideration, as hundreds of millions of birds die each year because they either fly into buildings or are attracted to the lights coming from them. The birds circle the lights until they become exhausted and then just fall to the ground to their deaths. There has already been at least one incident of a flock of birds circling the Tribute In Lights.

You should be aware that the WTC and the Empire State Building actually had a policy of turning OFF their lights to protect migrating birds. If the Tribute in Light were left on it could be disastrous. According to NYC Audubon, woodcock, song sparrows, dark-eyed juncos, eastern towhees, eastern phoebes, rusty blackbirds have all been reported in Central Park recently.

And in fact, migration generally peaks during the last week of April through the first two weeks of May. This is when the greatest number of species pass through – mostly neotropical migrants, many of which are under threat for a variety of causes.

All that aside, do we really need to further pollute the night sky? How ironic that a comet is now clearly visible to the naked eye in the same direction as the Towers of Light, but anyone living near NYC won't be able to see it because of all the light pollution. You yourself did an outstanding article blaming the tragic death of your friend on the horrid glare from the dismal acorn lights of Main Street, East Hampton. We should be directing light where it is needed–to the ground–and only in the amounts necessary.

Gary Citro
Hicksville
Via e-mail

Have you considered that directing light at the ground will keep awake ants, worms and other ground life?

–D.R.

A PREPONDERANCE OF PARKING PROBLEMS
Dear Dan,

I read with great interest your story about getting a ticket for violating East Hamptons no night parking regulation.

While the town of East Hampton is in compliance with the state regulations with regard to the placement of no night parking signs (your signs), your readers might be interested in knowing the town of Southampton is not.

The town of Southampton is in violation of state regulations regarding the placement of these signs and is issuing tickets, which are invalid and can be contested in court.

Several summers ago I was issued a ticket for overnight parking my car in front of my house. I was unaware of the town's ordinance and when I questioned the town's failure to post signs I was advised there were signs throughout the town.

I acknowledged to the court that I had noticed a sign which was four miles from where I lived which read Residential Area No Parking From 2-6 a.m.," but I assumed it applied to that area where the sign was located... not to the entire town. The court decided I was right and threw out the case.

The purpose of my fighting the ticket was not only to save the cost of the ticket but more importantly to have the town rectify the situation so others were not duped into paying tickets which were invalid.

To this day the town of Southampton is still issuing invalid tickets. They are in violation of the state regulation requiring signs notifying the public of the overnight parking restrictions to be located at the entrance of the town.

Hopefully the power of your pen will be more successful than my efforts to change this.

Hal Schroer
Southampton

Fighting and defeating invalid parking tickets is an exhilerating experience that is good for the body, mind and self-esteem. –D.R.

CLEANUP THE %#@$& LANGUAGE!
Dear Dan,

I would like to comment on your article, "June Madness," in the 3/29/02 issue.

First of all, I see no reason to use F—k in an article, even if it is a quote. I'm not a prude, but I think you could have used the 'hyphens' with the same effect. Secondly, Mr. Spota's first name is Tom, not "David," as you indicated. Lastly, and this one I must commend you on, is the line that says "how things move through the Southampton bureaucracy...this will poop onto the planning board's desk...." I assume you meant 'pop,' or DID you???? I happen to like the former word better, in this context.

Anyway, keep up the (otherwise) good work!

KINGDOM ON THE OCEAN. This oceanfront masterpiece is located on the gold coast area of Dune Road in the Village of Westhampton Beach. A series of interacting curves provide fabulous ocean and bay views from its many glass walls and private decks. The main level offers a spacious and dramatic living room with fireplace and soaring ceilings, a dining room, eat-in kitchen, two guest bedrooms, media room; plus a junior master suite that opens to pool and beach. The second floor master suite with fireplace and sundeck overlooks the ocean, along with a very sensual spa bath overlooking the bay. A sitting room and artist's studio also offers a private deck. A guest room, maid's room, gym, media room, sauna and garage complete the lower level. The gorgeous 20 x 40 oval heated gunite pool/spa area with a fully equipped cabana and a dramatic walkway to the ocean beach gives this house that certain wonderful feeling! OUR EXCLUSIVE, Folio #9151, $3,975,000.
